Coach Of The Year

We at CVS have always known that Coach Bernie O'Brien is the outstanding football coach of the Chicago Public School System, but now he has the official recognition from all the prep sports writers in the city. They have elected "O-B"—as he is fondly called by both faculty and students—as Coach Of The Year, a title which he justly deserves.

Since 1957, "O-B" has been head football coach at CVS. In that time he has coached five Chicago Public League Championship teams, four of those being in the last four years. Many members of these teams have gone on to distinguish themselves in college ball because of the sound training they had received under Coach O'Brien.

"O-B" has given CVS his best since he first came in 1952. His boys on the team know him as a tough task master but also a fair one. They have learned from him not only championship football plays, but also championship qualities for life. For this they thank him.

Silvia Vargas

Dear Sil,

It's been real fun being your locker partner, all three our four years here at the Palace. We had great fun together although we weren't in any classes together. May you succeed in everything you do & find much happiness in your future.

The organization of any modern high school is a marvel of intricacy, and of this fine, large, vocational undertaking at Chicago Vocational High School, it is a miracle of schedules, programs, events, classes, and enterprises that require the finest of its residents to insure its successful progress toward a worthy goal.

Like a fine watch, these activities and events must be geared, timed, and regulated so that the quest for knowledge may proceed in an orderly fashion.

As vocational education is on the move, stimulated by strong financial support from the Federal Government, so Chicago Vocational High School is on the move to offer new opportunities to our students, and to keep its present offerings consistent with the changes taking place in business and industry.

Important new gains will be registered in our plastics, graphic arts, aviation, and business courses during 1967. These changes will be fitting to the beginning of the second quarter-century of our school's service to the southeast Chicago community.

The TECHNICIAN staff, under the able direction of the sponsors, has assembled between the covers of this book a story of another school year in a great American High School. The story can only touch upon the highlights of an eventful year—leaving to those who have lived these events the task of filling in the details.

The story concerns itself with clubs and societies, their members and sponsors; with teams and their coaches; with students and their teachers; and with events replete with action and excitement. It tells in picture and prose of classes in a wide variety of subject matter.

All this is the Story of CHICAGO VOCATIONAL HIGH SCHOOL made famous by the devotion and dedication of a great number of talented people, seeking to teach and students seeking to learn.

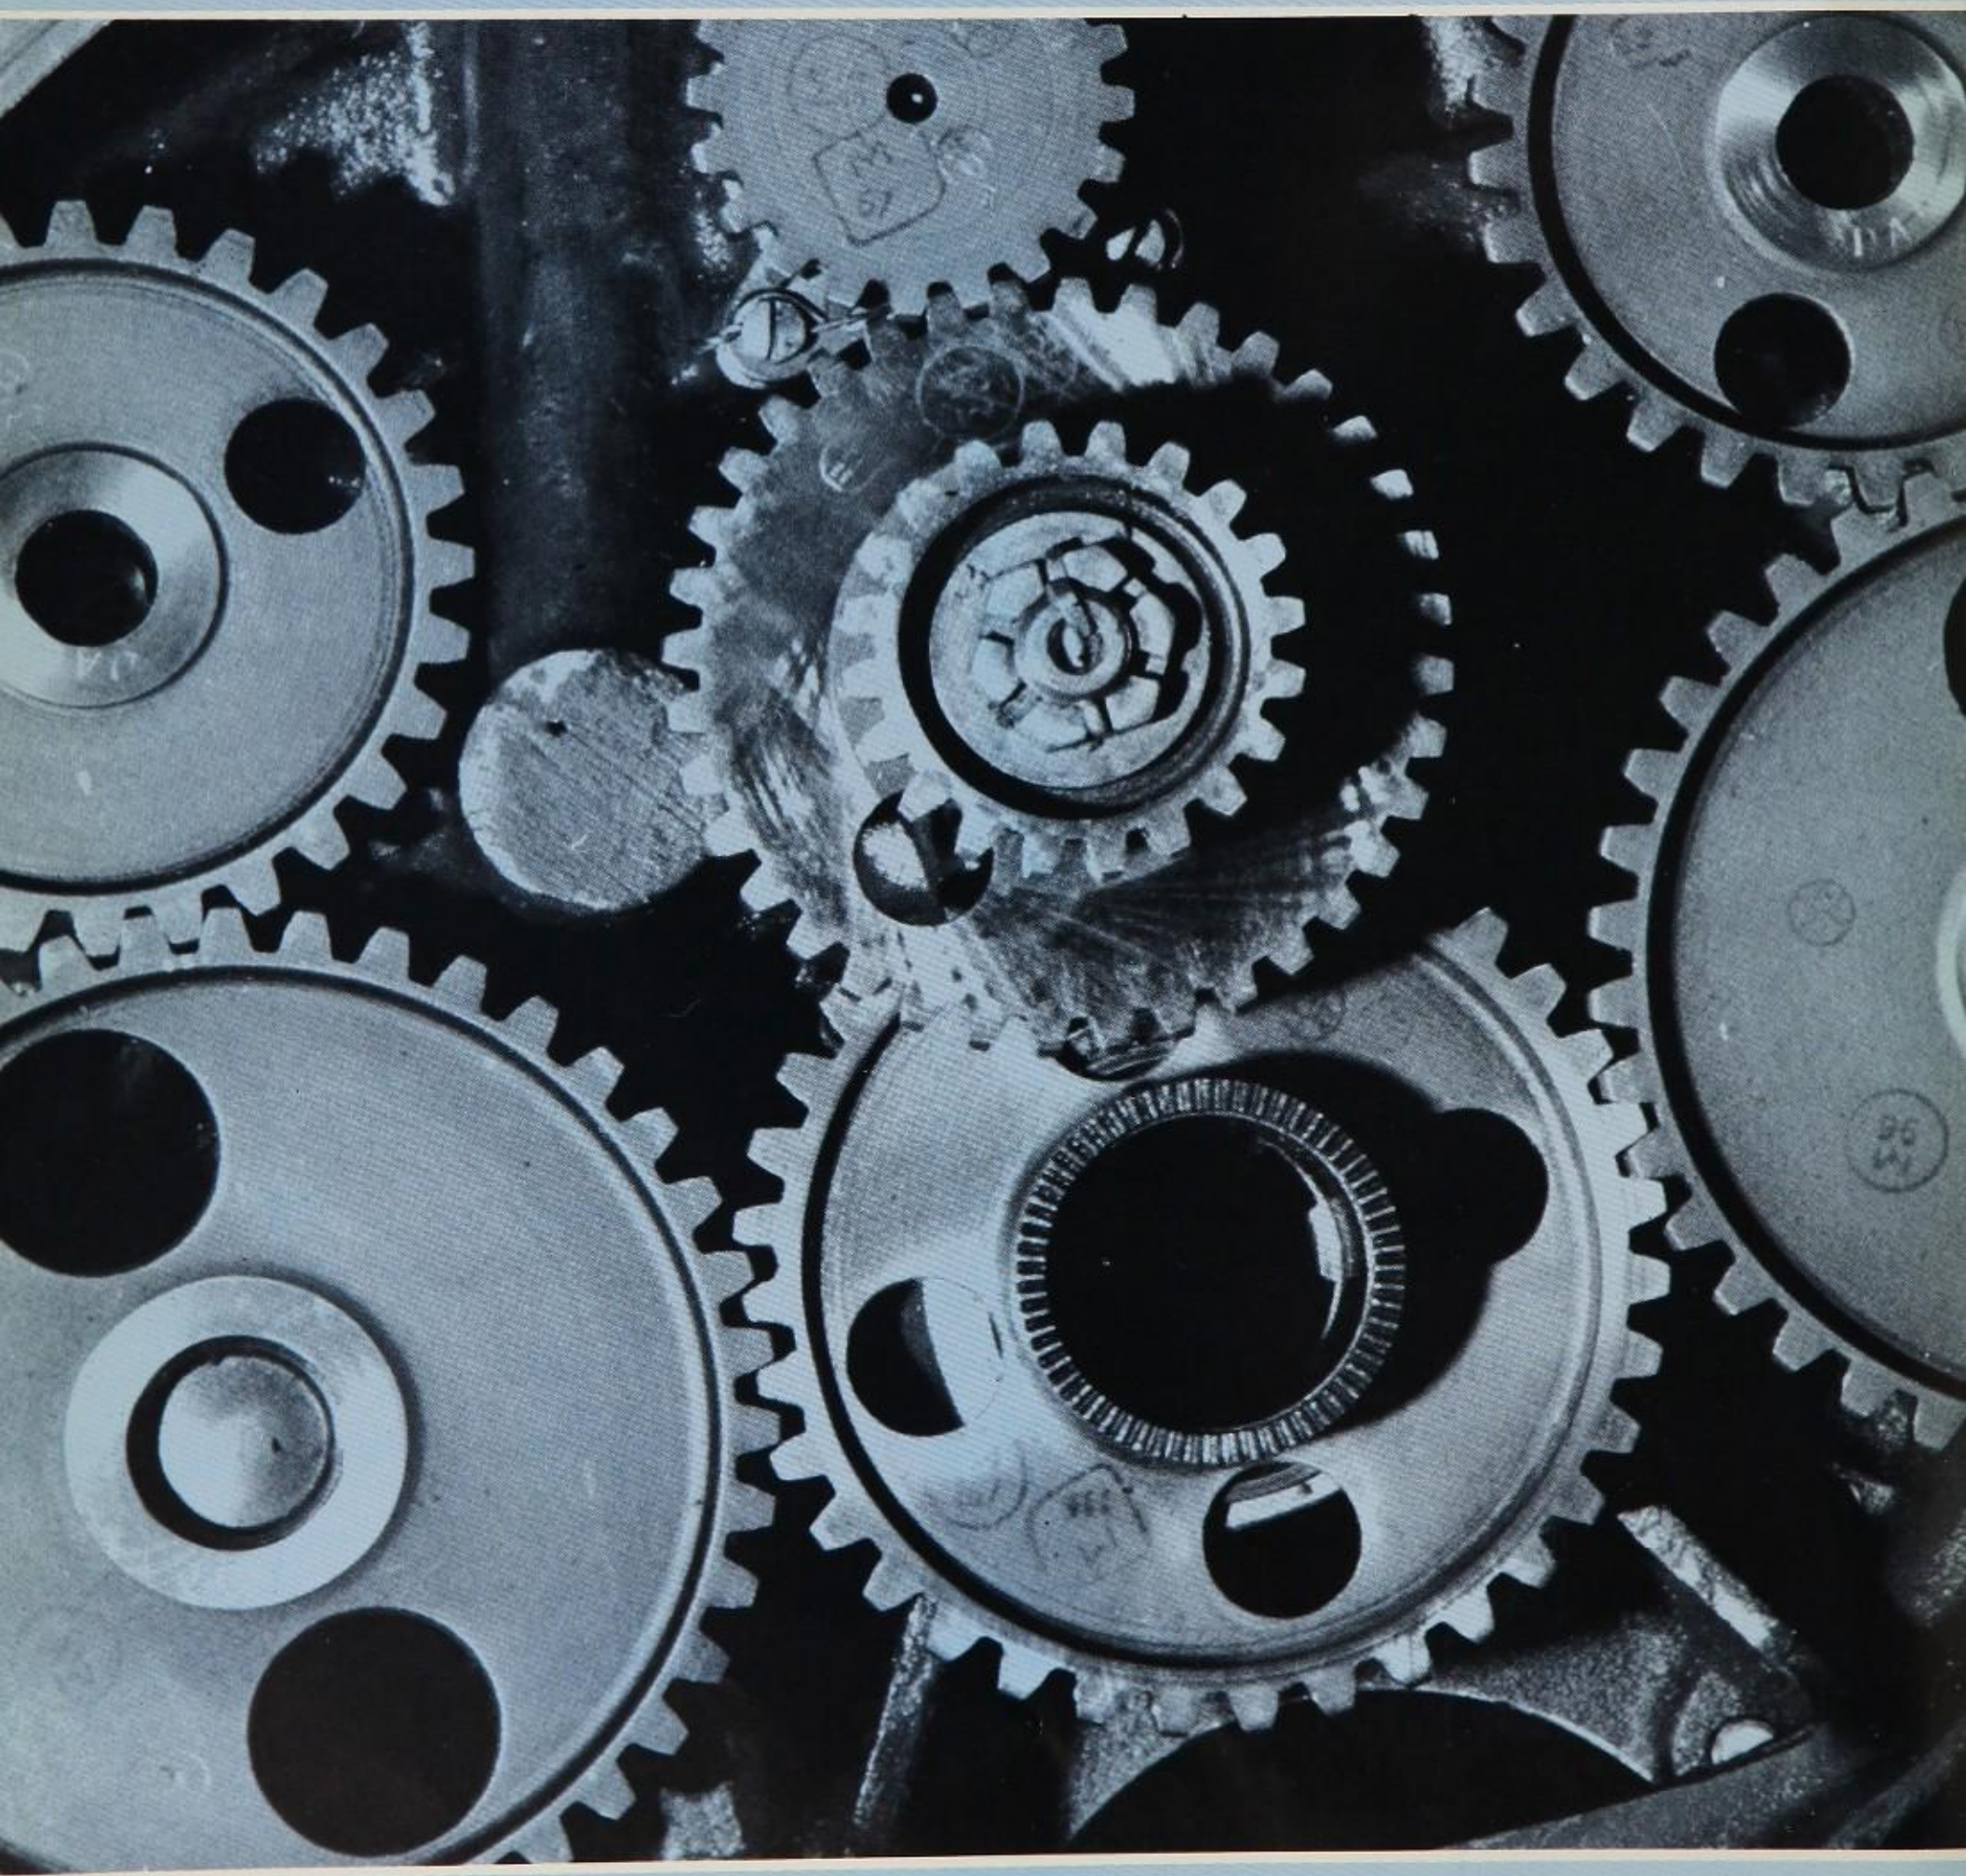
Senior Boys Council

The Senior Boys' Council, made up of boys who give much of their spare time in service for the school, is one of the most elite, well-known and honored organizations in the school. Started in 1952, the Council is celebrating its 15th anniversary with Mr. Roy Young as sponsor. Mr. Young originated the idea of having a group of boys, who are ready to help for the good of the school.

The Council performs such tasks as escorting visitors in the school, ushering at assemblies, supporting movies, sponsoring Big Brother Day, and helping teachers in many ways. This year the Councils' traditional gray sweater and patch have been replaced by a dressier blue blazer and crest.

To become a member a boy must be recommended by his division teacher. He must have high grades and high trait ratings. He is then considered by the Council members, boy's teachers, and Mr. Daily. If they feel he is qualified, he then becomes a full member of the group.

Being a part of this organization is truly an honor that is cherished by every Council member.



The Gears Of Knowledge

The gears of a machine transmit motion from one portion of machinery to another. If the gears are set correctly, the machine will operate smoothly; if not, the machine is useless. It cannot operate unless all gears mesh.

In our own lives we must set our "gears" correctly if we are to function as successful human beings. To do this we must have knowledge; to acquire adequate knowledge we must have an education, an education which will enable us to establish the values which will be ours for life. Chicago Vocational High School offers such an education to those who have a strong desire to succeed and realize that success comes only after hard work.

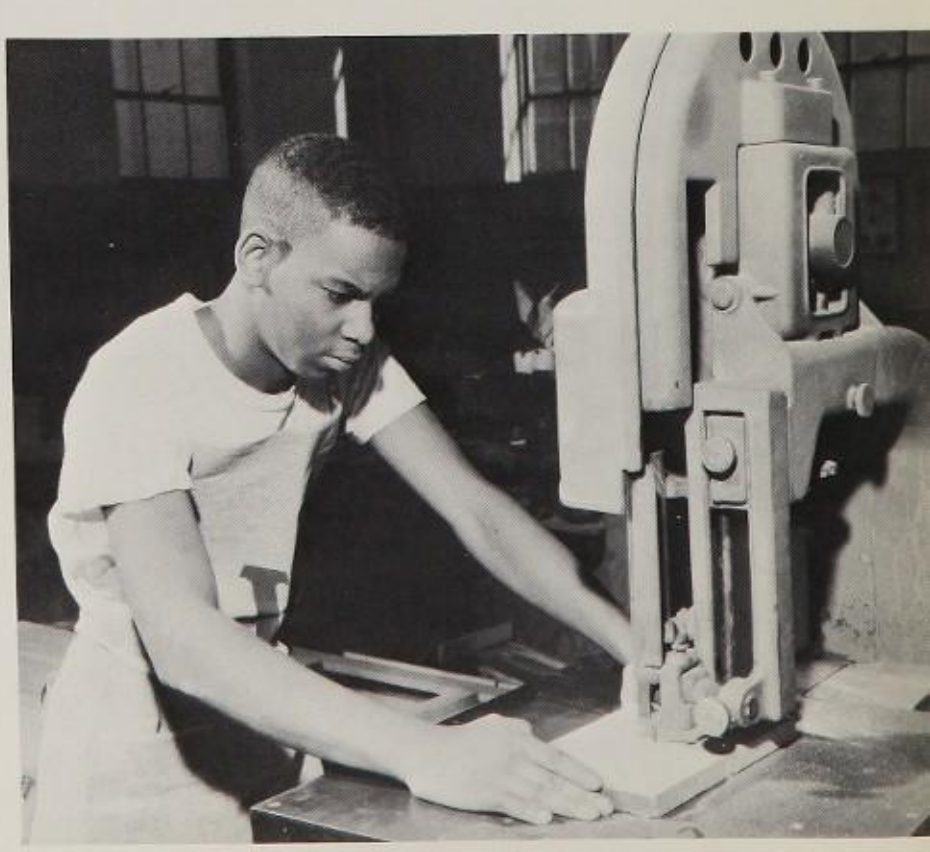
Success in our classwork is of the ultimate importance. The gears must be adjusted so that we can learn. To do this, time is set aside to study both at school and at home for our shops and our academic classes. We take from our subject matter in proportion to the effort we put into it. Much effort produces results of which a student can be proud.

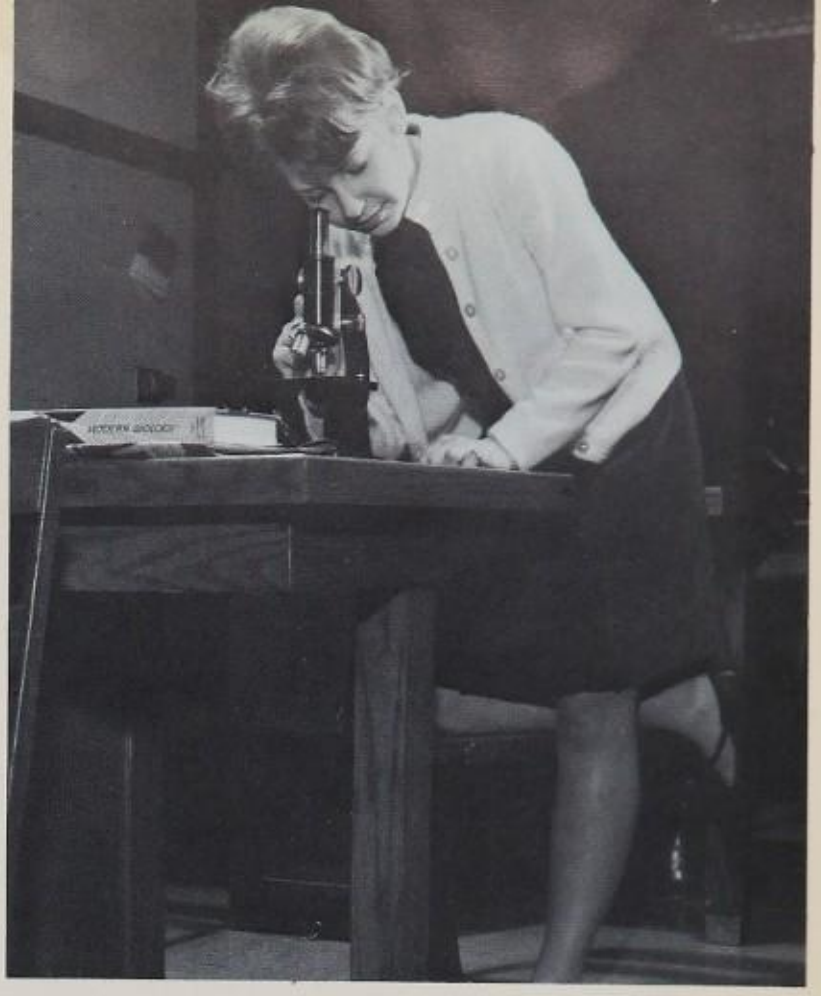
We are social beings who must also learn to work well and be of service to one another. Clubs, organizations, and committees afford an opportunity to do this at CVS. For the first time many of us learn the pleasure that there is in seeing a project through to the end and in being of service to others. Our social gears are being set for future use.

Our years in school are a preparation for a full and useful life in society. These are difficult but rewarding years which will give us the foundation for the acquisition of further knowledge. Through this knowledge we will be an asset to ourselves and to our country.

SHOPS AND CLASSROOMS

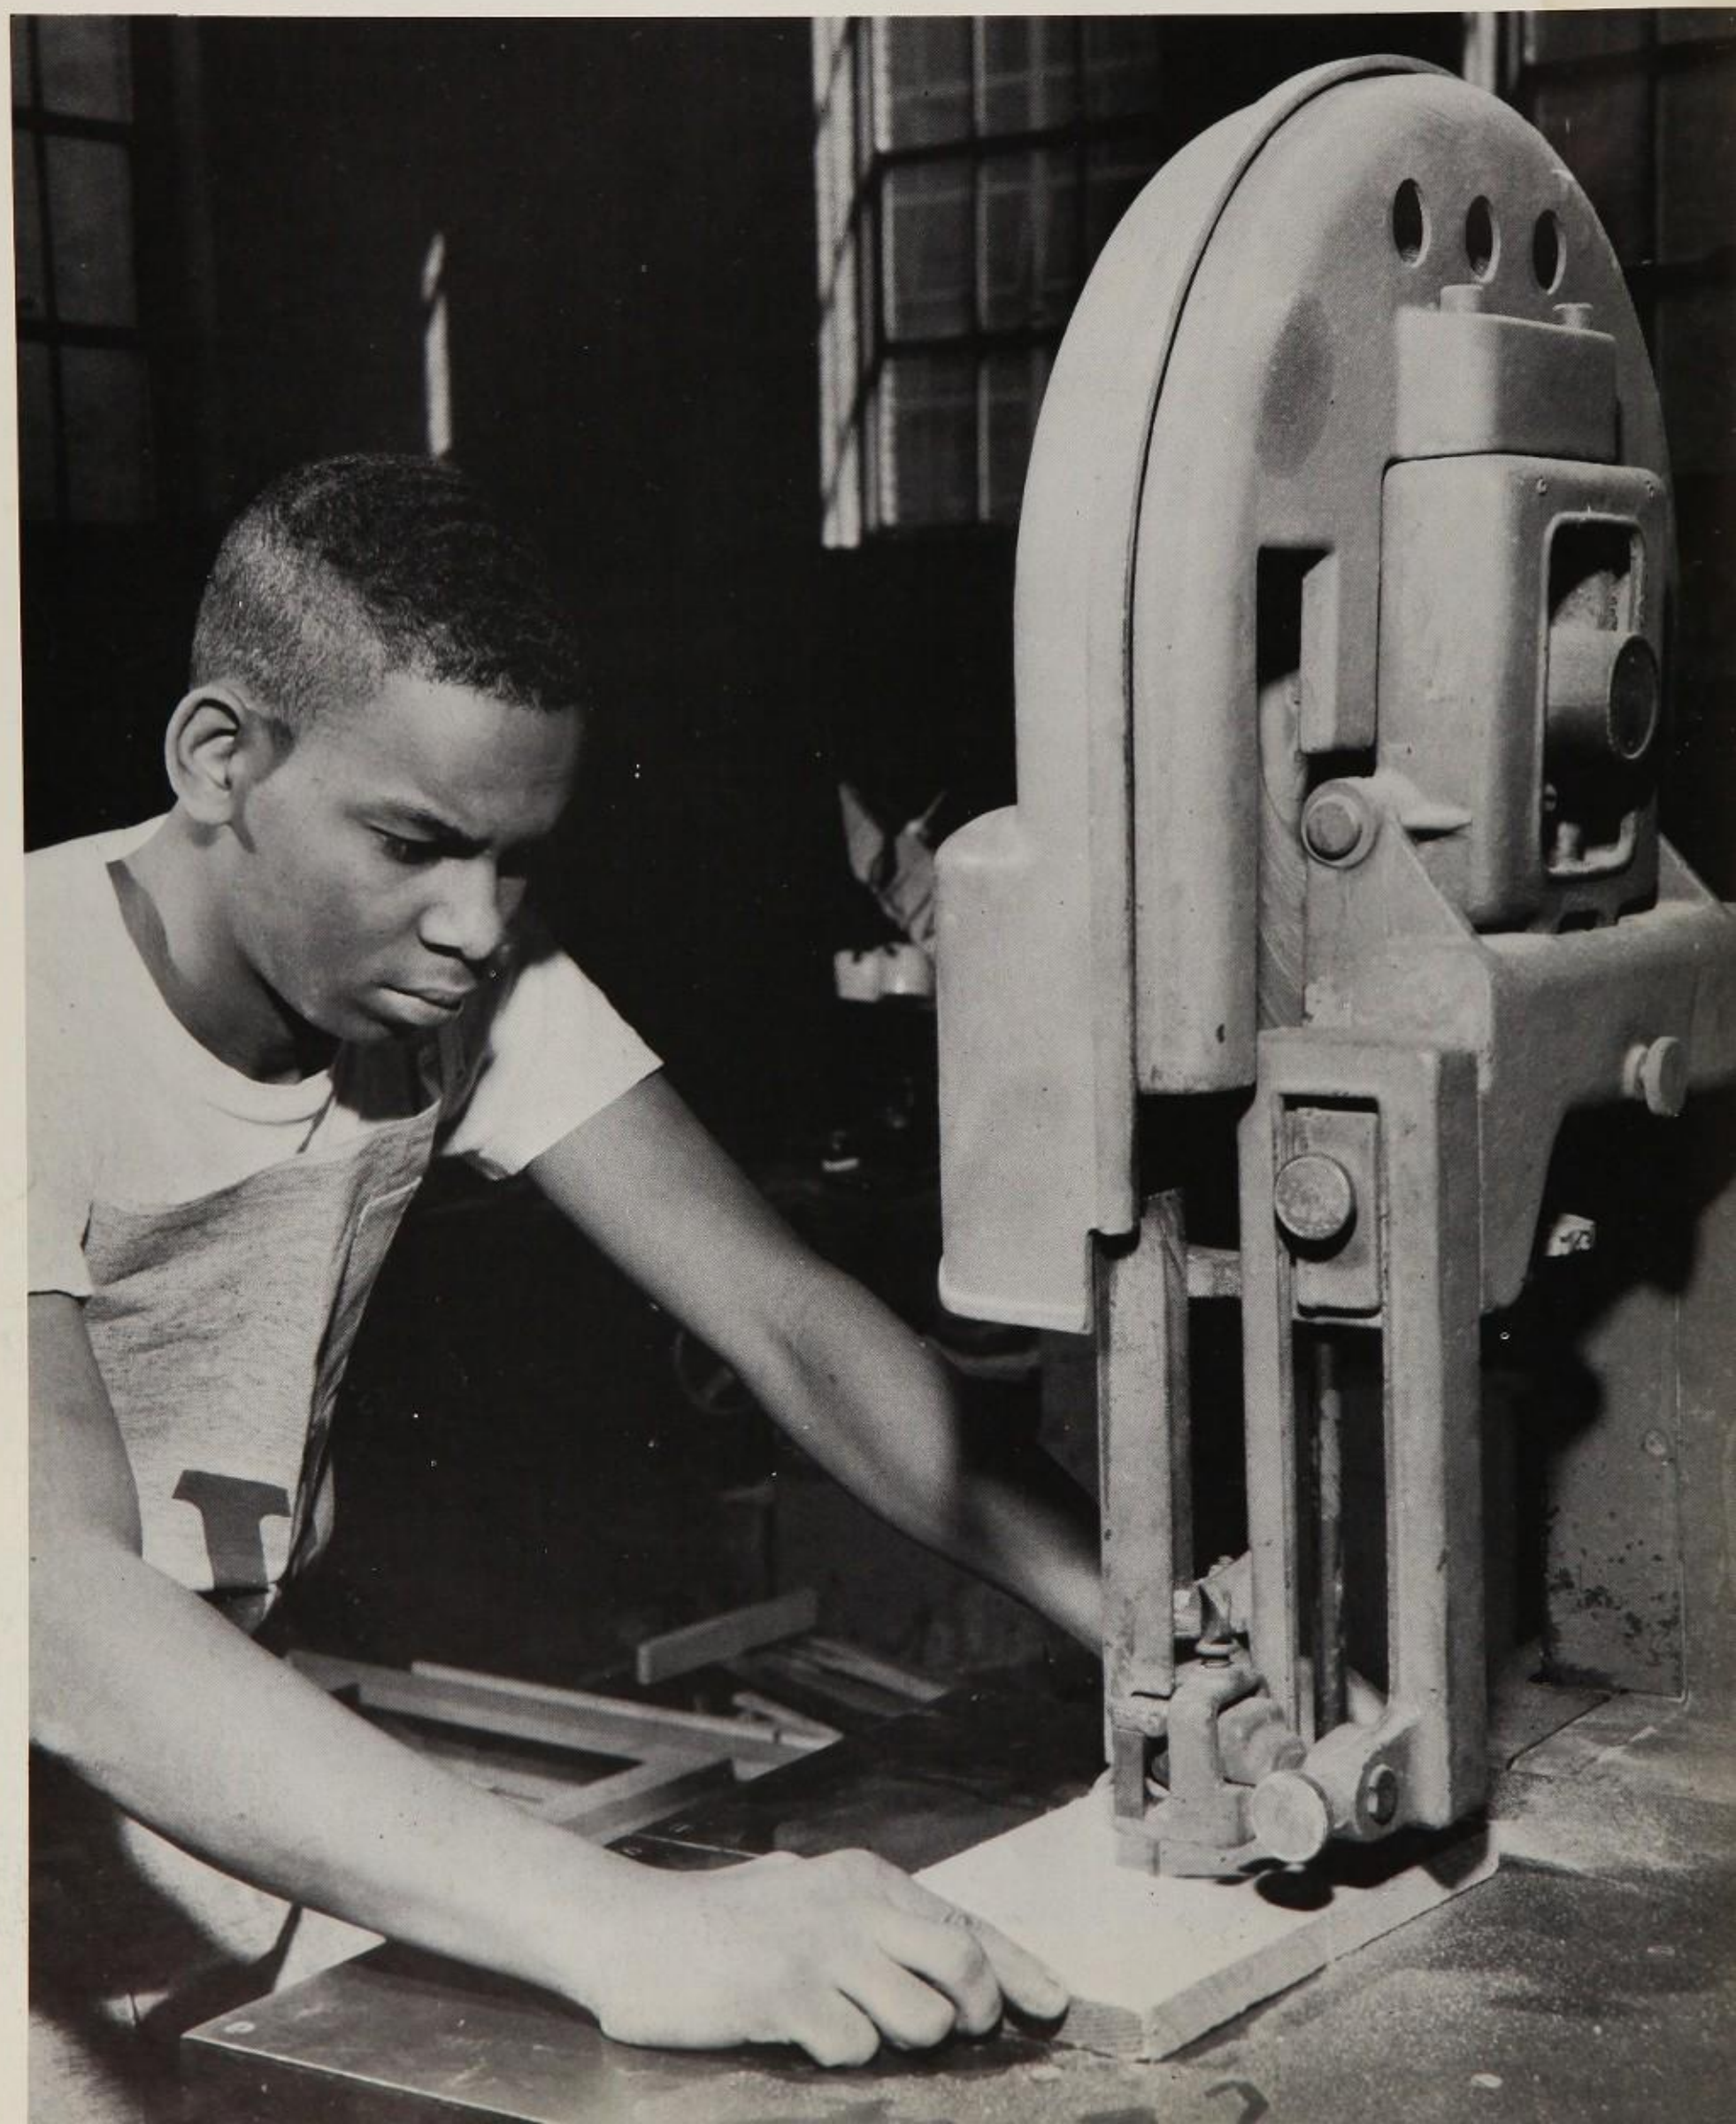
The architect, Danner Bierhous, realizes careful preparation of his blueprints means a successful completion of his project.





Cabinet Making

With an intent look on his face, Bernard Walker finishes cutting the wood for his latest project.



Patience and determination are being exhibited by Mike Grillow, Don Gulley, and John Henderson in wood shop. With such qualities, how can they fail?

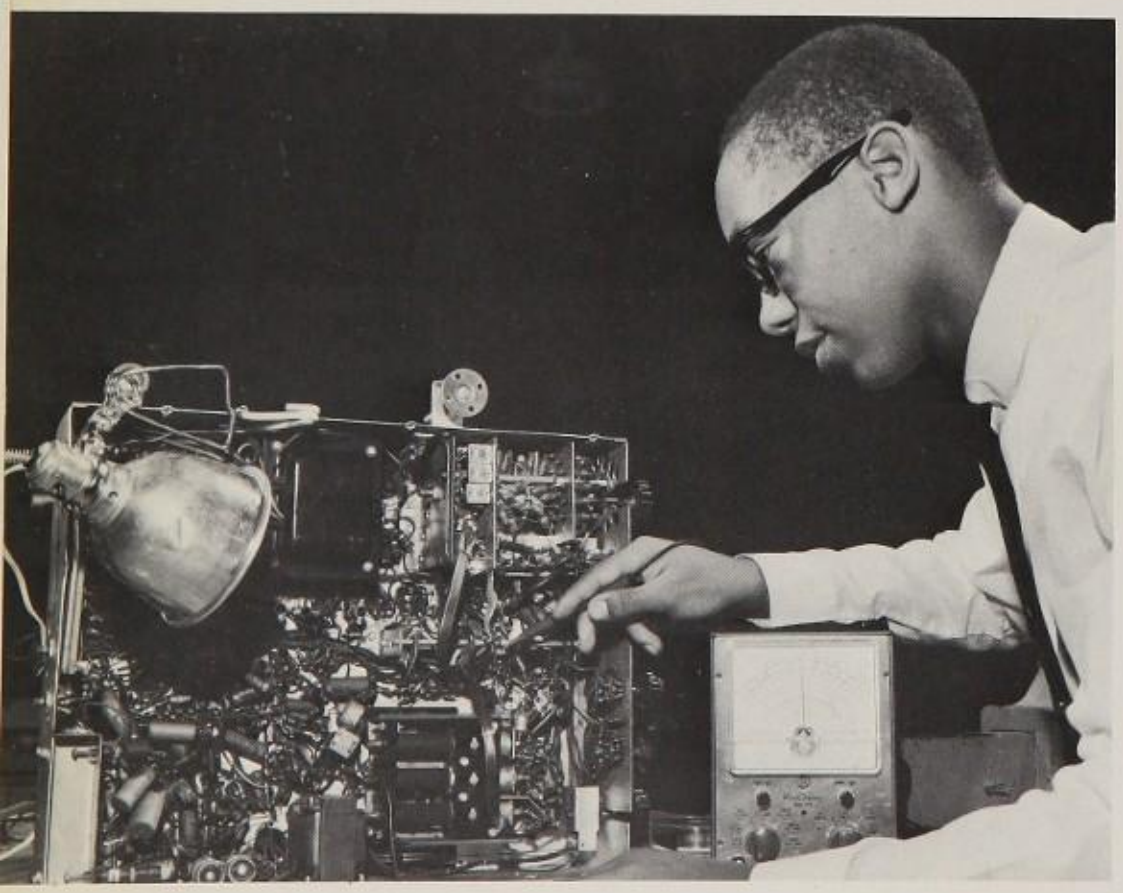
The opportunities to do beautiful and complicated work are there for the asking in wood shop. Anyone who has attended the CVS Craftsmen's Fair can attest to the magnificent results of those students who truly participated in their shop work.

Projects such as chests of drawers, tables, desks, night stands, and bookcases are brought to a successful completion under the instruction of well-qualified and dedicated teachers. Students find that this work is quite rewarding and the basis for an interesting hobby.

For those whose grades are high enough and who are seriously interested in entering the cabinet making field, an apprenticeship with a major company such as Motorola or Zenith may be attained. They take only the best which is an incentive for the production of excellent work by an aspirant.

Juan Antonio Velazquez uses the jointer to plane a piece of wood for the table he is completing.

Determining the characteristics of transistors are Robert Zdych and Dave Dobrzynski.



A complicated network of wire and tubes occupies Joseph Cole as he measures the electrical current.

Electronics

We are living in an age in which the use of electronics has become an essential part of all industries trades, and occupations. Computers, radar, missile guidance systems, radio, television, and business machines all need the work of the young man trained in the field of electronics.

The purpose of electronics shops at CVS is to familiarize the student with the basic concepts and theories of this field. Electronics must be broad enough to give the student a working knowledge of the fundamental principles and skills in all electronic occupations. These principles and skills will serve the students as the foundation for more specific training in the field of his choice.

The need for electrical engineers, technicians, and mechanics is overwhelming. The role of electronics classes at CVS is to prepare the student for his entrance and efficient participation in the affairs of the industrial community of which he is a part.

Electric Shop

Walter Puterko checks this armature for a short circuit on the armature tester.

This toaster will be working again when Tom Avers finishes checking the heating element and makes the necessary repairs.

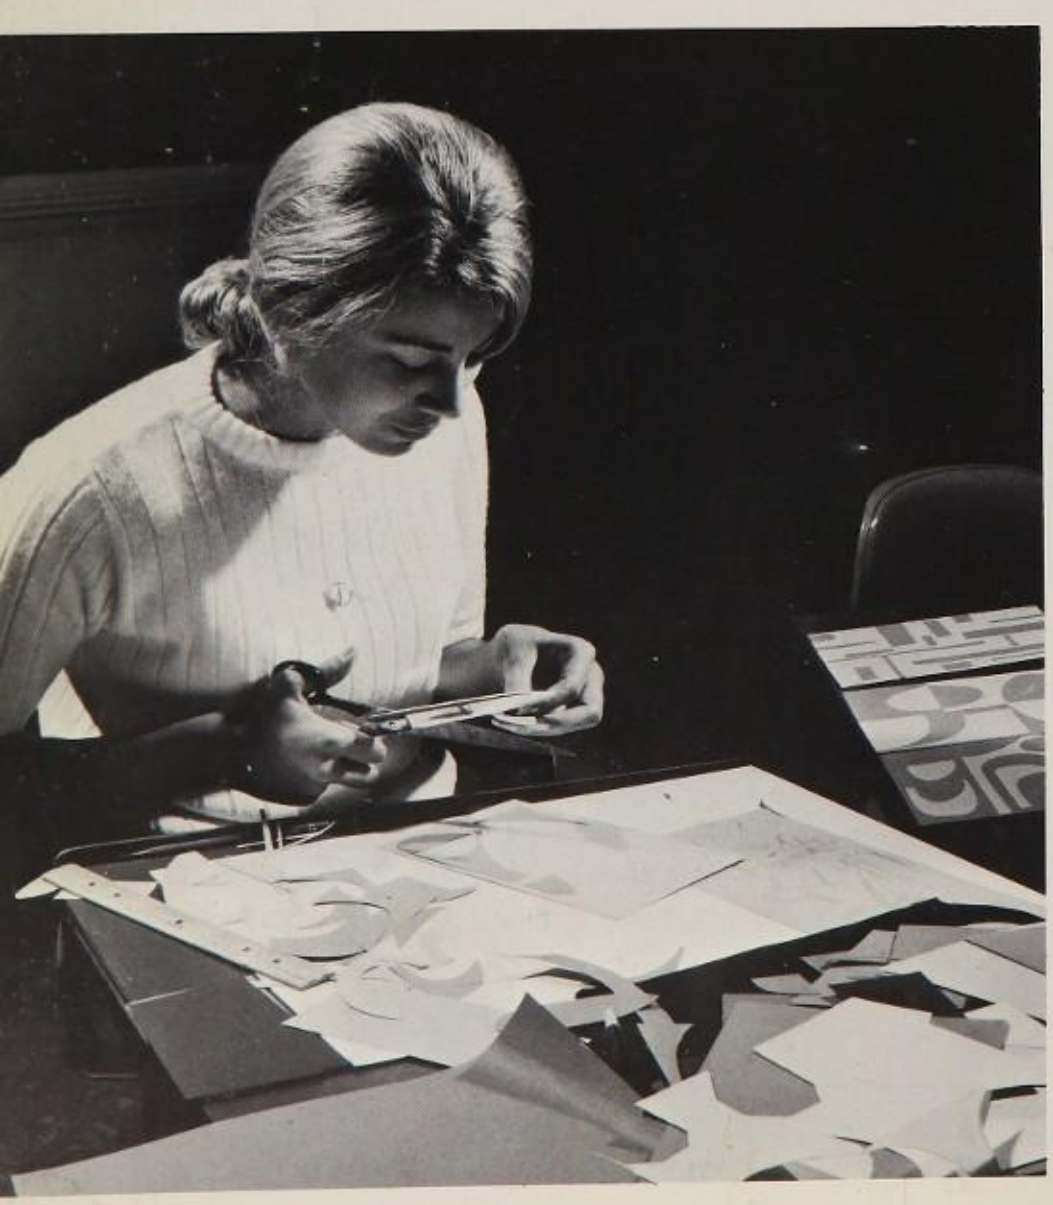
Electric shop students start with the basic principles of electricity. Such simple, but useful, projects as testers and soldering irons make up a large portion of their "try-out" courses in first and second year. If they then choose to major in electricity, they are taught vital technical knowledge and mechanical skills. Familiarization with motor winding and repairs of telephone circuits, motor control, test equipment, and other electrical apparatus is offered.

Manufacturing, construction, installation, utility power companies—to give a few examples—use electrical equipment of some kind. All must have regular service and repairs which call for trained technicians. Proper training for this lucrative field can start at CVS.

Art Education

You must possess a special talent for commercial art, as Denice Saverson, Darice Gustafson, and Pat Grod know only too well.

Lovely patterns are developing as Ada Sanchez works on her project for art class. She's pleased with the results as she should be.



Commercial art is a wide field. It includes every instance in which utility and beauty meet. The commercial artist prepares magazine illustrations, editorial cartoons and designs cars, planes, buildings, and architectural exteriors.

Students at CVS prepare themselves for an art career by competing in nation-wide scholarship contests, local exhibitions, class projects, and home sketchbook work. After graduation many of them attend such well-known schools as the Art Institute and the Chicago Academy of Art.

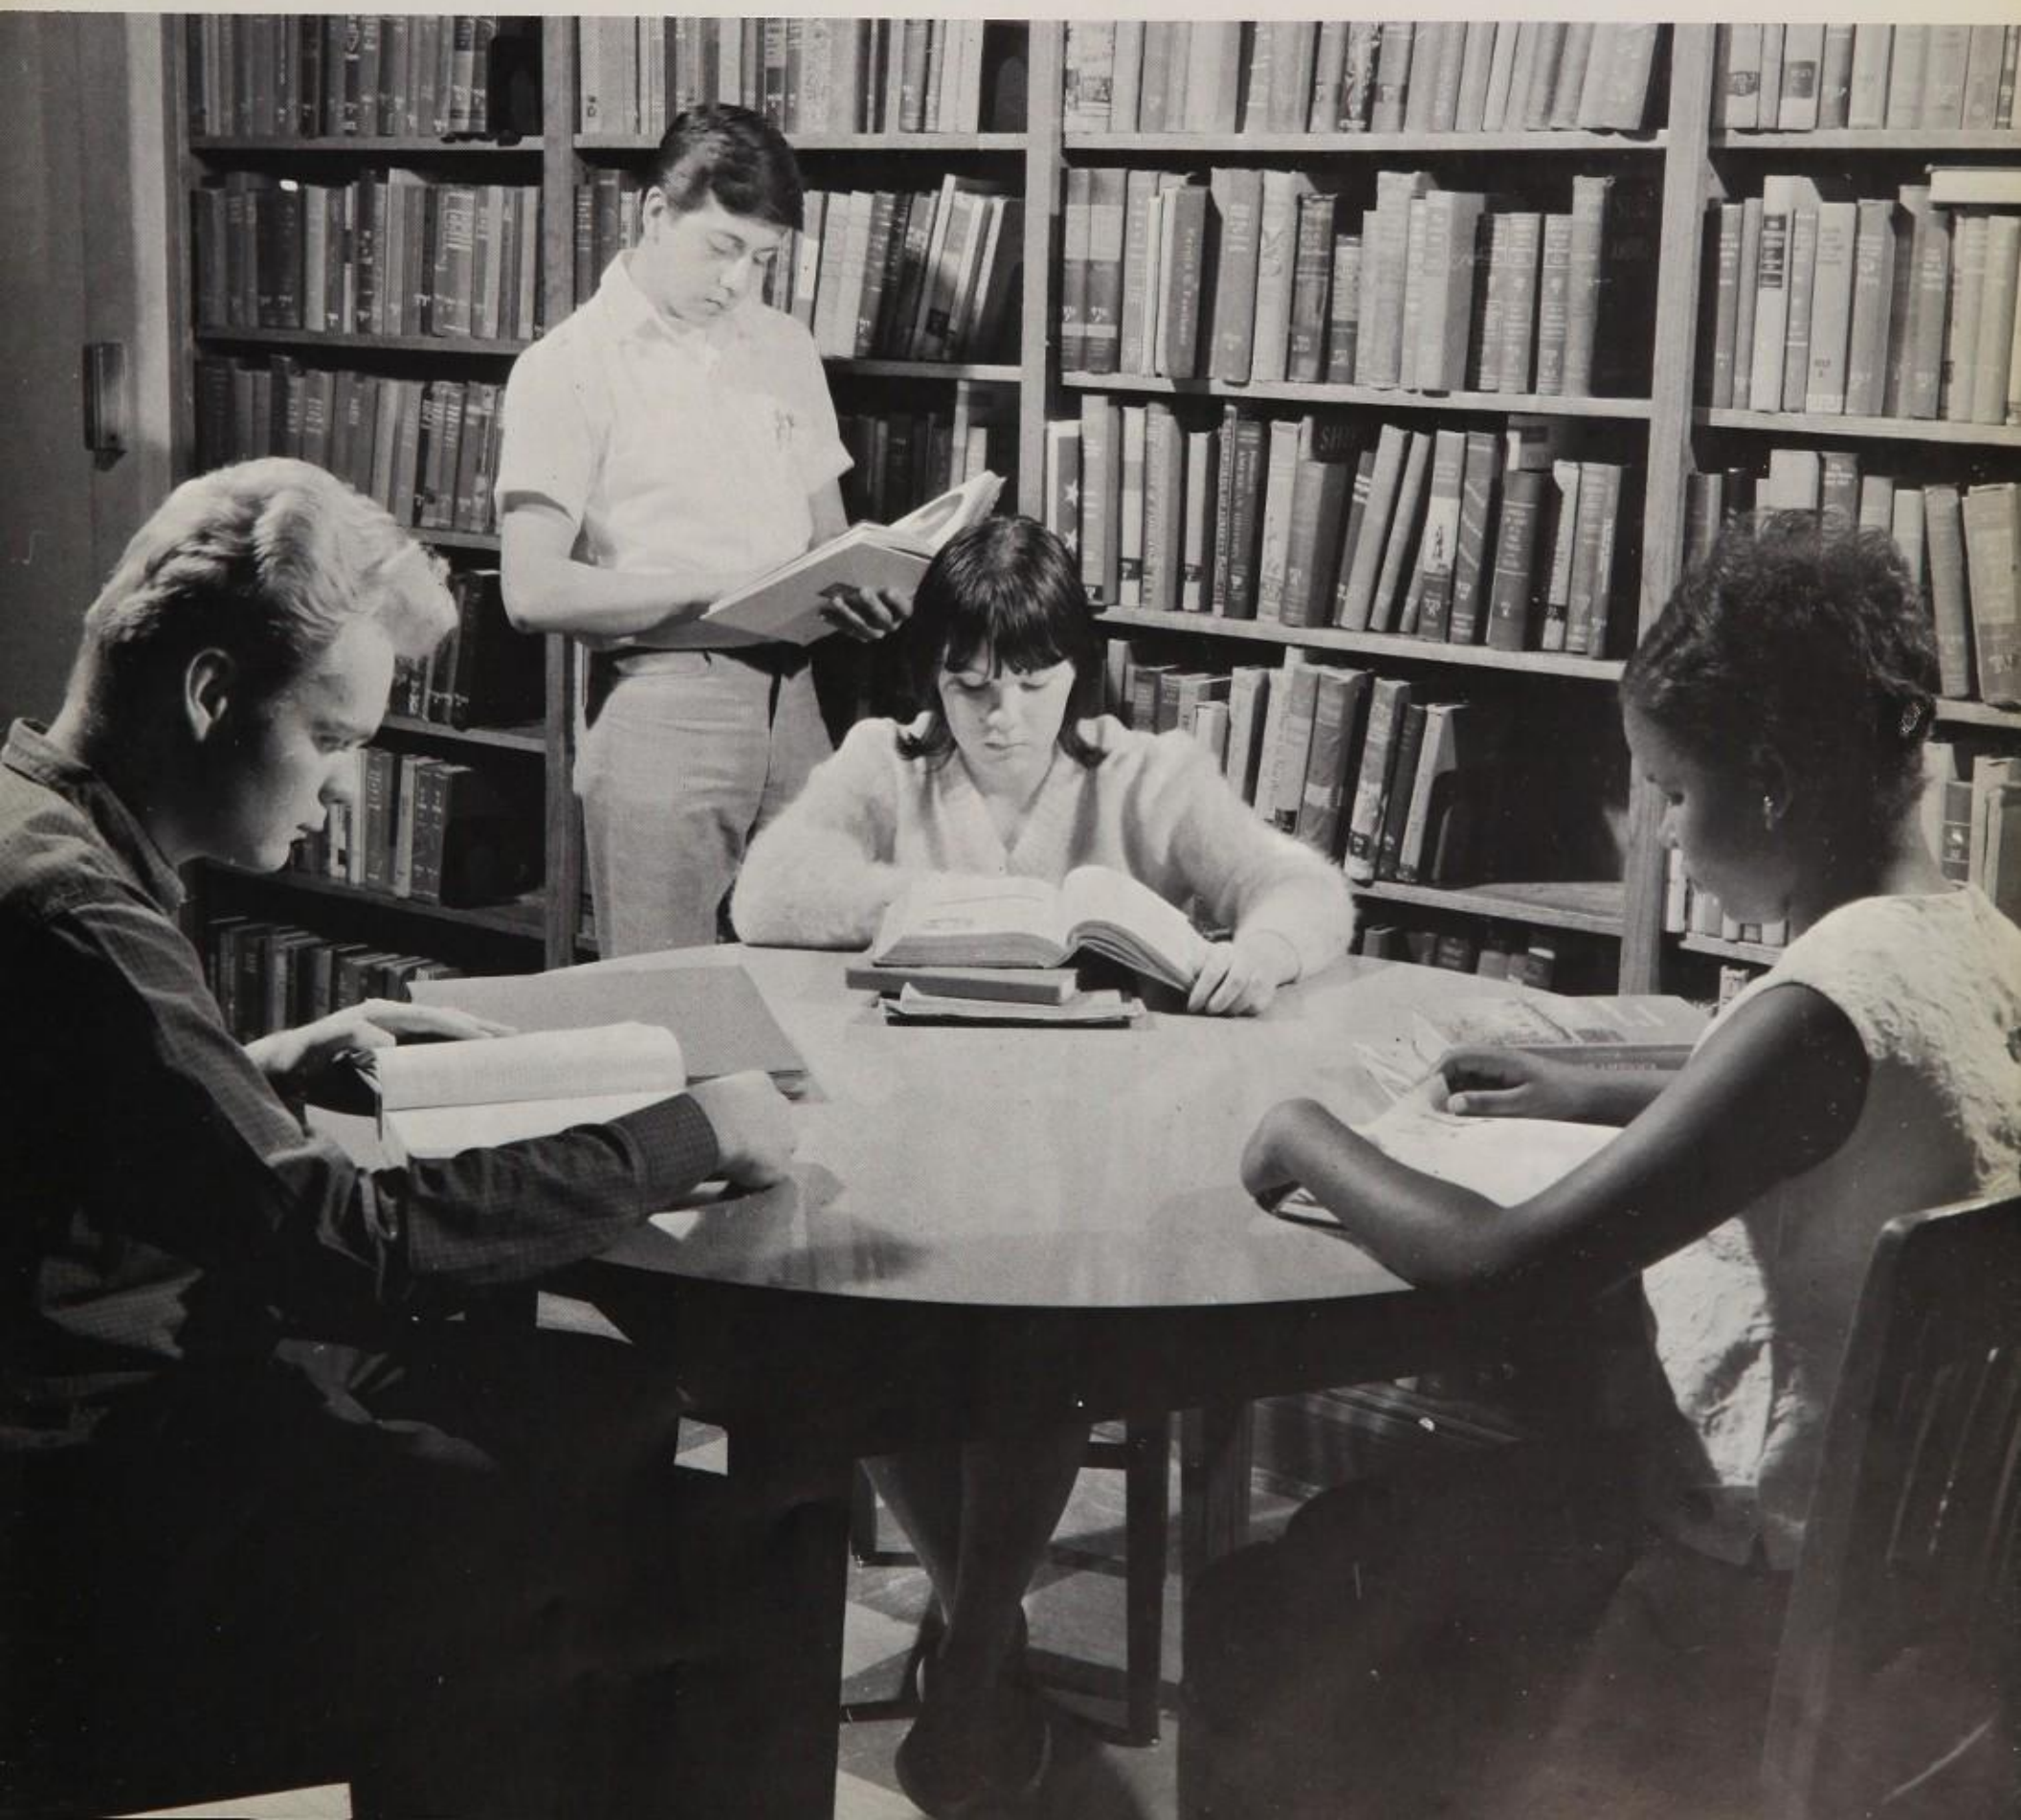
If a student is genuinely interested in becoming an art major at CVS, he must present a sample of his work to Mr. Johnson. Upon approval, he can then begin acquiring the skills and knowledge that will make him a successful artist, no matter which branch of the field he chooses to enter.

Our Library

The electric quality of immediacy is to be found in that dynamic center of culture, the CVS Library. The atmosphere is geared to searching for knowledge, sharing ideas, spending shining moments with the great minds in the arts and sciences.

From the time the entering freshman receives his library card to the day he proudly receives his diploma, he has access to thousands of volumes. To paraphrase a modern expression, these really are the wonderful years during which the young American must keep up with the latest information available in science, aviation, engineering and world affairs. CVS produces well educated citizens, and the library plays a major role in this effort.

Making full use of the libraries assets are Gregory Manow, Kathleen Smith, Fanny McDonald, and Gerardo Sanchez.



Business Education

Barbara Millar is testing her speed and accuracy in preparation for her future work as a secretary.

The main objective of CVS Business Education is developing marketable skills in the areas of Stenography, Business Machine operation, Office Practice, and Distributive Education. CVS graduates command excellent salaries as they enter the labor market in the areas of their major, prepared with the skills needed now to man the "facilitative and clerical" function of business. The "now" is the reason for the introduction of modern equipment, such as our electric typewriters; for the touch shorthand program, which does for shorthand what the typewriter did for longhand; for the active D.E. program to prepare young men and women for advancement in the marketing and distribution phases of business; for the Office Occupations program coming in September that takes advantage of experience as a teacher by including employment instruction.

Of eventual greater importance is the attempt to develop the ability and desire to change as the needs of business change through further formal or informal education.

The experience that Lupe Pena, Sylvia Vargas, and Linda Hoble are getting by typing from a dictaphone will be invaluable to them after graduation.

The girls in business education are often putting their skills to work to help the teachers in other departments. Rose Mary Wyrwa and Anita Oryhan are duplicating important material for class.

Marily Glinski and Noreen Griga are concentrating on articles they're typing for the Trademaster.

No longer a dull and uninteresting subject. Mr. Higgins shows that you can still have a few laughs in his history class.

History

The Social Science Department aims at creating loyal, intelligent, and well-informed citizens. To do this, courses dealing with world history, United States history, government, Communism, geography, and economics are offered to the students. A thorough study of our own government and the workings of other governments enables a student to understand that he is living in a very complex world with staggering problems. His understanding of the situation will help to alleviate some of the problems for our country.

Besides classroom work in history, there is much use made of audio-visual materials. Recordings of events and voices of history, filmstrips showing the development of man, motion pictures, maps, and models are effectively used to enrich the subject matter in the courses.

Claudia Jawarski hopes that she is giving the correct part of speech in Miss Watson's English class.

English

The English courses at CVS are geared to three levels of ability: honors, average, and remedial. Students are placed in one of these three groups after the decision has been made as to which class will do the individual the most good. These decisions are based on test scores and recommendations by English teachers.

The study and mastery of English are extremely important to the student for his success in other courses. We must make ourselves understood by correct use of the spoken and written word. All classes require this. If a student has followed his instruction in English carefully, he will be able to communicate with the teachers and students in other classes.

Striving for mastery of our own language is a worthwhile and rewarding endeavor.

Auto Mechanics

One of the most rewarding educational programs is practical instruction in automotive services. CVS administrators and auto shop teachers want to provide the kind of training that will be most valuable to students when they go to work. For a young man with ability, educational background, and practical training, the automotive service field offers a wide range of job possibilities and opportunities. The student upon graduation may wish to enter such diversified jobs as automotive mechanic, specialty mechanic, shop foreman, service manager, salesman, parts manager, jobber salesman, technical teacher or even insurance adjuster and claims manager. The background in automotive service received at CVS will enable the student to achieve his aspirations.

Practical experience with automobiles is assured the student of auto mechanics. When he is ready, the student will work on a car under the supervision of one of the auto shop instructors. He will meet the same problems that the certified auto mechanic encounters in his work. The student's grade will be determined by his proficiency in his chosen trade. Interesting, well-paid jobs are available in the field of automobile service and repair for the student who is willing to apply himself.

The trouble has been located by Ray Bauer, but John Studnicka and Ron Crenshaw are offering him some wise advice on how to proceed.

Mr. Makuch points out what has to be done to Bill Montgomery. With such expert help, Bill will successfully complete the repairs.

They have diagnosed the trouble and now they will begin corrective measures. Vincent Mata, Barry Stokes, and Cliff Hall know their business and will have his car looking like new.

Chemistry

Chemistry is a required subject for all plastics and horticulture majors, but is an elective for others. Those students who plan to enter the field of medicine or its related fields are strongly urged to take chemistry before they enter college.

The chemistry classes at CVS emphasize the scientific method of learning through experimentation, in other words, discovering through doing.

Students study such varied subjects as the atomic structure, the molecular theory, gas laws, how to prepare oxygen and hydrogen, acids, bases, and colloidal dispersion. The laboratory work on these and other topics is done under the watchful eyes of Miss Patricia Young. At times the rest of us may wonder what's cooking in the chemistry lab, but we can be assured that the chemistry students have all well in hand.

Tom Burton and Sandy Gustafson don't look quite sure that their experiment with sulfur and iron is reacting properly, but we have faith in them, don't we?

Jim Sanders, with safety glasses in place, is intent on gas welding these two pieces of pipe. Safety precautions are always taken before a student begins to weld.

Welding

This year Mr. Zimny's arc welding group has acquired a new tungsten inert gas welding unit (T.I.G.). This unit is one of the latest machines which can be used for the welding of all types of metals from aluminum to stainless steel. The use of this bend testing machine has proved that not all welds that look good are good. It gives the students a sense of pride when their welds have been tested and pass the T.I.G. unit.

After the completion of all basic welds, the student has the opportunity to practice with pipe, cast iron, brass, bronze, aluminum, and stainless steel. Projects such as trailers for boats, railings, jack stands, car ramps, outdoor grills, and other metal projects are undertaken. Success in these projects means that student is ready for the competition of industry.

The man in the iron mask is none other than our own Fred Budeselich, testing his arc weld on the new T.I.G. unit.

Horticulture

Mark Karwatha and Cardinal Wilson practice flower arrangements. A lovely one, to be sure.

Sandy Gustafson is seriously examining the product of many hours of tender, loving care.

The greenhouse at CVS provides the background for our two horticulture majors, Stan Rusiniak and Bob Wandachowicz. Make sure, boys, those flowers are ready for Mothers Day.

The horticulture curriculum is intended primarily for students preparing to produce flower crops, nursery products, and other ornamentals. The students engage in floriculture, service activities, or do research in the field. Their studies are varied including production of flower crops under glass and out of doors; greenhouse operation; retail and wholesale marketing; flower shop management and floral designing; nursery operations and maintenance of grounds. Those interested in horticulture will find its commercial possibilities unlimited.

The work of the Horticulture Department gives job to all of CVS and their families. Flowers and plants go on sale before special holidays such as Easter, Christmas, and Mothers Day. Students and faculty members make it a point to choose for themselves a beautiful plant to brighten their holiday.

Cliff Hartman, Donald Baker, and Gerald Boyson help one another replant geraniums for a horticulture project.

Biology

The students in biology are involved in scientific pursuits leading to a better understanding of basic biological concepts. They are given opportunities to develop skills and techniques used in scientific research and to develop attitudes and appreciation of biology.

The course is divided into six basic units: interpretation of the basic needs of all living things; interpretation of cytology; investigation of anatomy and physiology; understanding the continuity of life; interpretation of ecological relationships; observations of man's control and cooperation with his environment.

The students are encouraged to further their investigation by following individual interests and pursuits. Information concerning summer workshops and fellowships is readily available.

Charts, microscopes, slides, and books are there to help Barbara Pickelman and Carmen Rivera learn their biology lessons well.

Sandy Russel checks his job in the laminating press while Lawrence McBride used the heat sealer.

Plastics

One of the primary objectives in the plastics course is to get acquainted with the materials of the plastics industry so that through actual shop practice students work with the materials and learn their identifications, applications, and limitations. Sheet stock material lends itself to fabricating methods and thus a person with design ability will increase production of numerous projects.

Molding materials such as powders and granules are shaped into molds or dies either by the compression or injection method. The big cry in industry is for maintenance men who can care for this production molding equipment. At CVS, students are trained for this type of work and are given an opportunity to work with one of the latest fully automatic screw type injection press. No other high school has equipment of this nature as yet so our students have an advantage in the handling of industrial equipment.

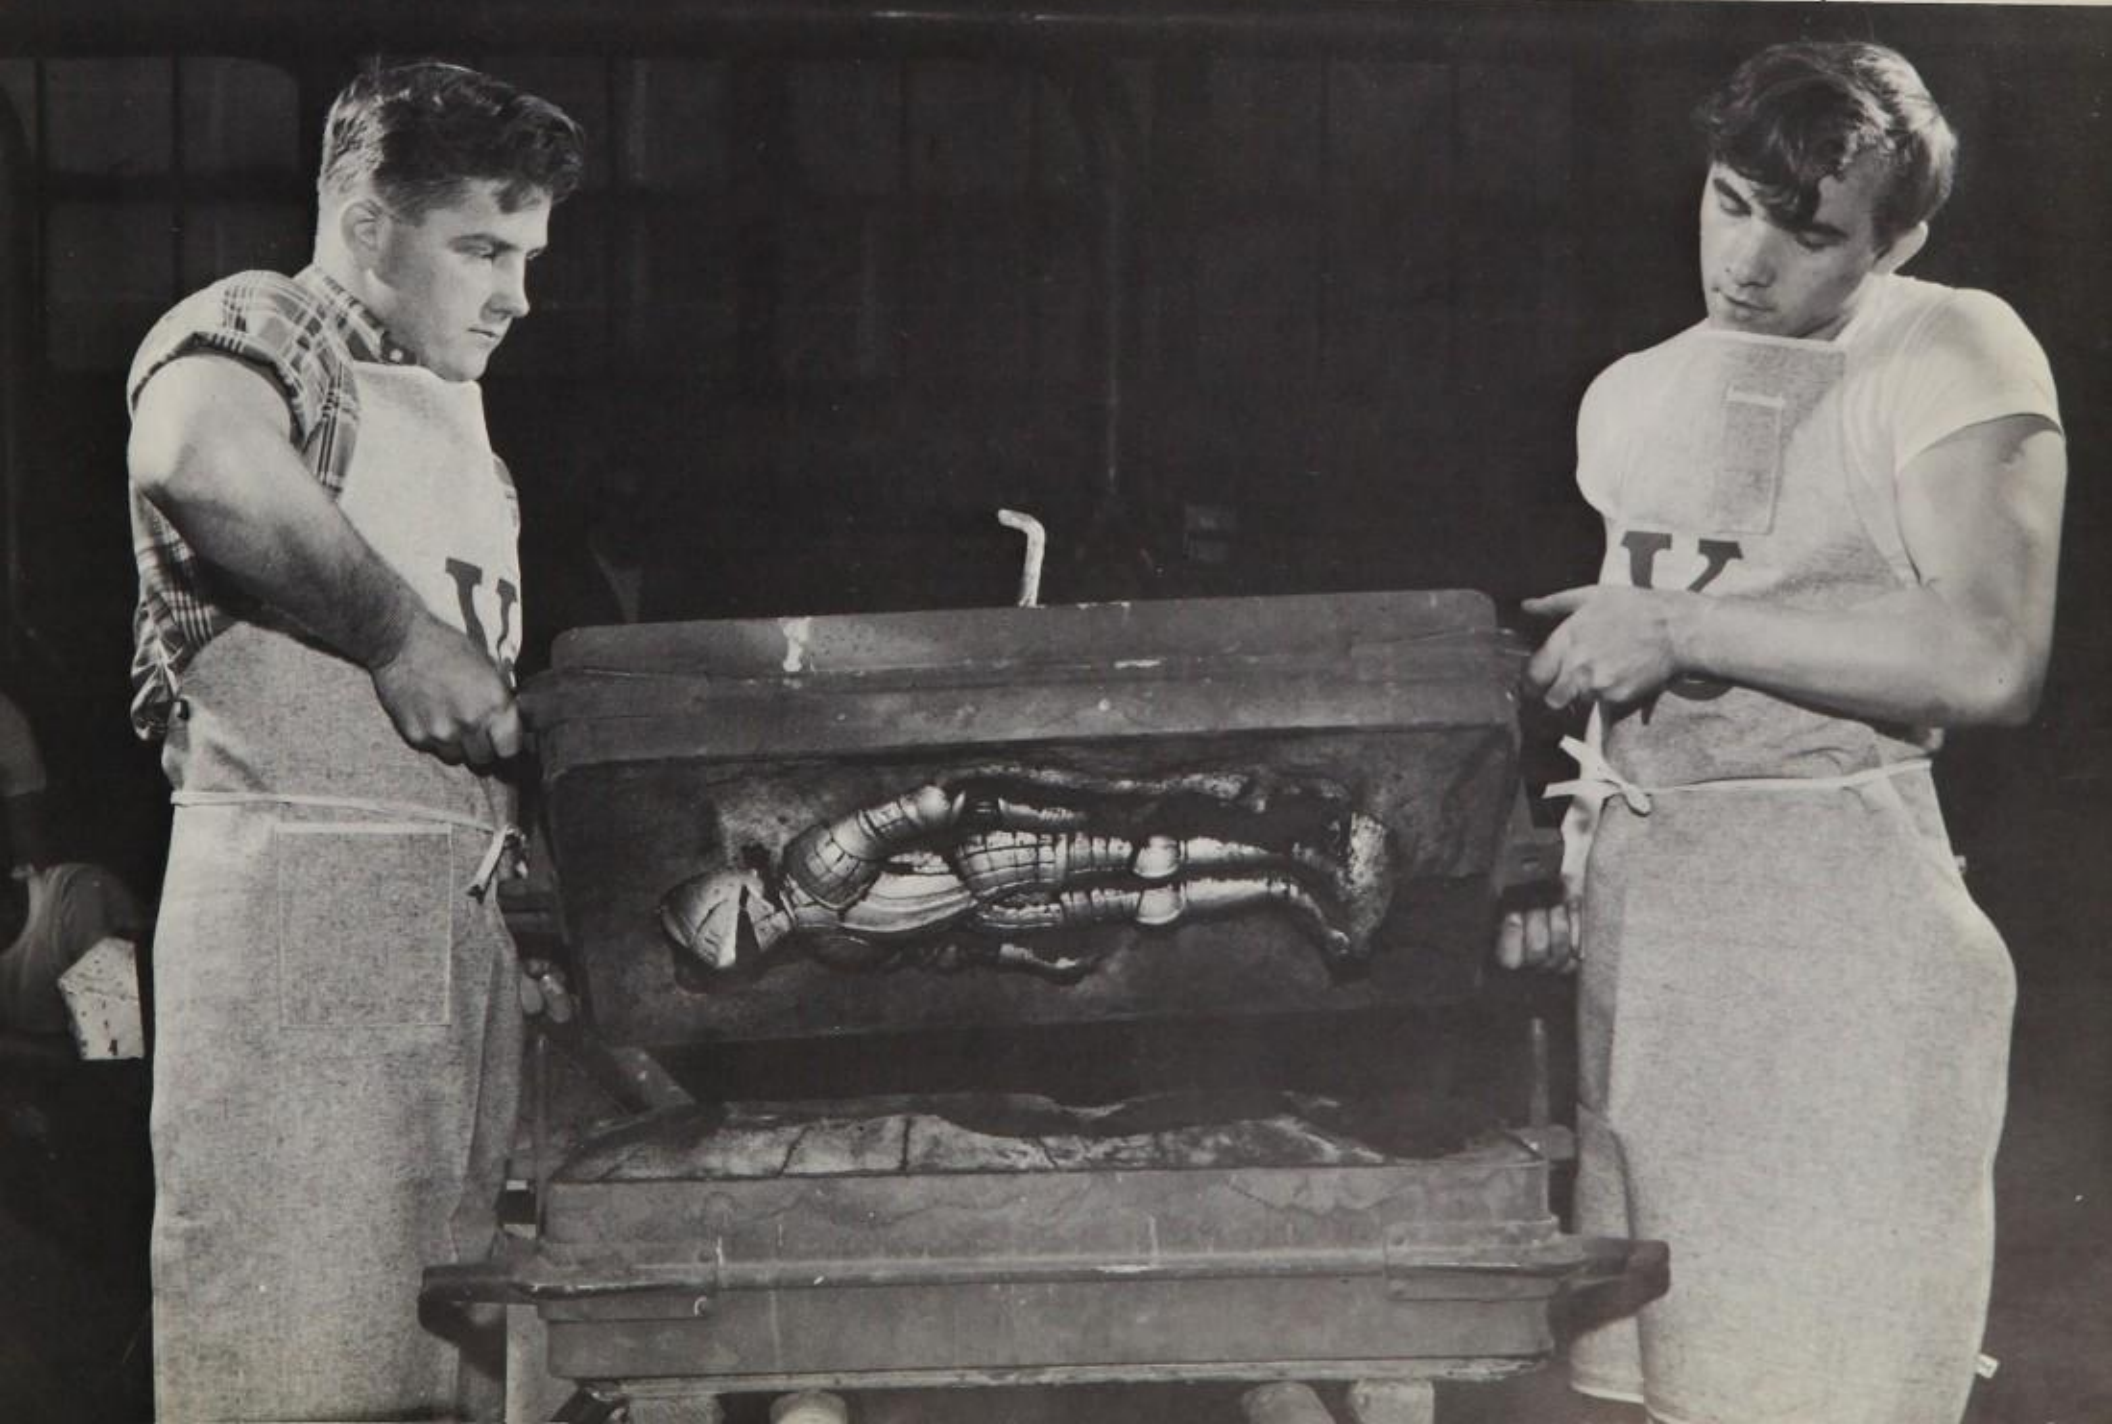
Making a mold for a small leg part of garden furniture requires patience and skill. These qualities are employed by Harold Kemp as he smooths the sand with a slicker.

Foundry

The foundry is the third step in the production of parts for industry coming after the work of the designer, draftsman, and patternmaker. Our school is in the heart of the metals industry and draws many students who will go to work in the mills after graduation. The training of these students in foundry practice is most important.

Innovations in the foundry industry in the last ten years have developed a need for skilled craftsmen and technicians. Our school provides training in electric furnace operation, related metallurgy, molding, coremaking, chipping, grinding, sandblasting, inspecting, and testing.

Visitors are always welcome to the foundry to view the pouring of hot metal, always a beautiful sight to behold.



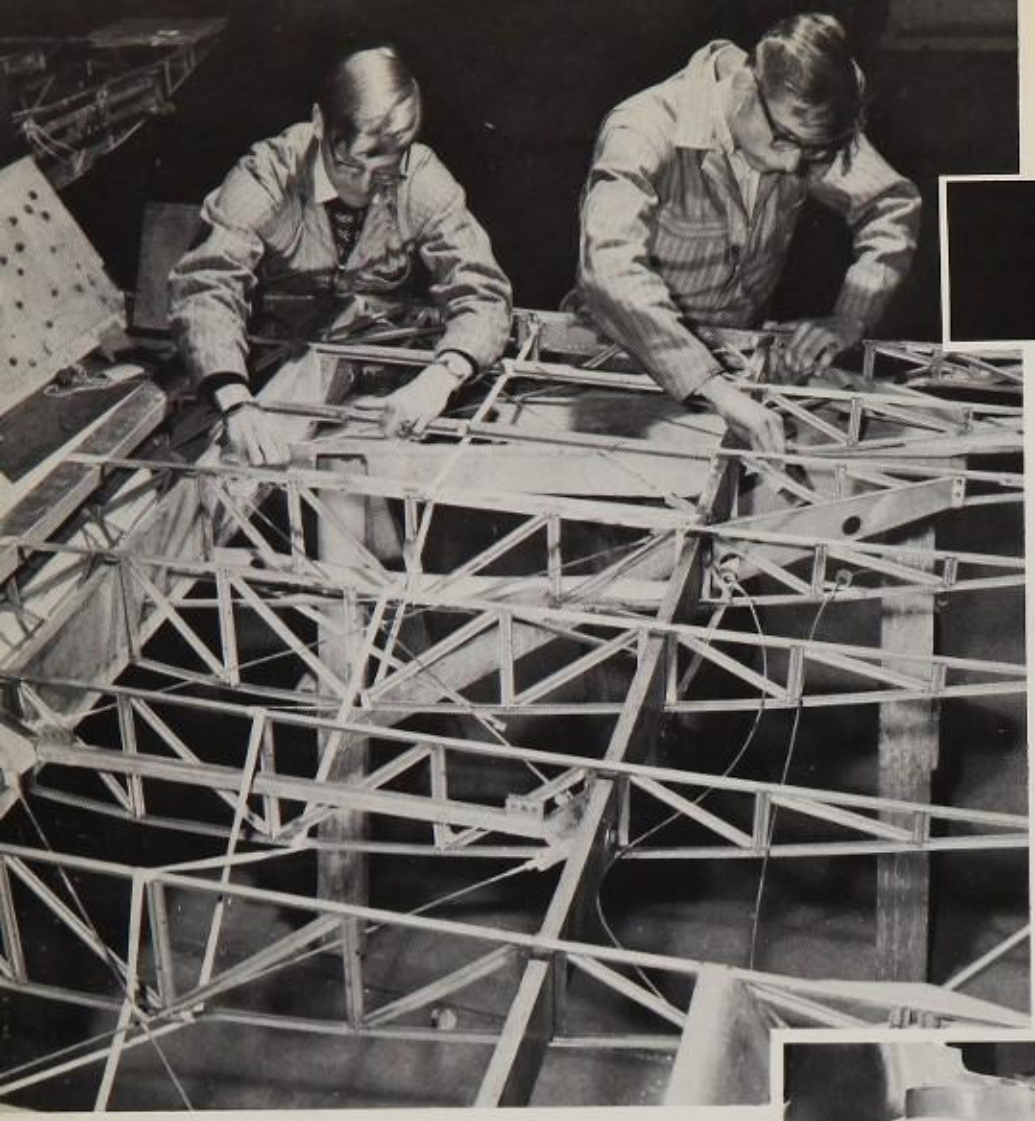
Larry Kelly and Gene Zukowski cooperate with each other to produce an exhibit for the Craftsmen's Fair from the foundry. How did you do, boys?

Aviation

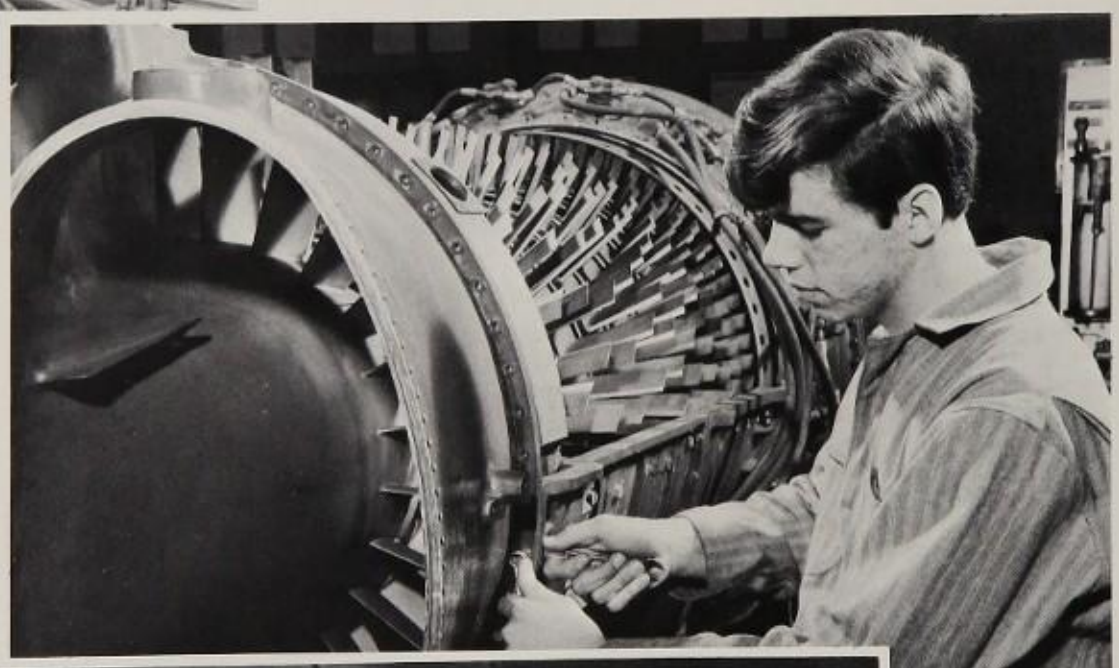
CVS is one of the very few schools in Chicago offering courses in aircraft power-plants and structures. This fully accredited course gives the CVS aviation student a good opportunity to obtain a mechanic's or structure's license upon graduation. The key to this opportunity is dedication and hours of study and shop work. For those who wish to continue their studies beyond a high school level, a post-graduate course is also available at CVS.

CVS has the most up-to-date equipment and highly qualified instructors in the Chicago area. The hangar, the only one of its kind in the Chicago Public School System, provides an excellent atmosphere for an aircraft shop. It contains two jets and four propeller-driven aircraft.

With the aviation industry expanding as its current rate, opportunities are numerous and the benefits immeasurable.



George Gogue and Joseph Krimmel are industriously repairing an airplane wing which was damaged in a storm.



Ronald Gawrys installs a starter section on one of the turbo-jet engines in the hangar.

Mr. Dorigan looks on approvingly as Dennis Dorigan and John Gbur examine their aircraft and dream of the wild blue yonder.

George Cutich appears to be thinking of how he and ThomPilewski are going to use the boat they are building.

Sheet metal is a shop with many phases, but Peter Kalweit and Gary Bruin realize that in the end it is good work that counts.

Sheet Metal

The fabrication of galvanized iron, aluminum, copper, and other metals, in sheet form, is an important process in building construction, and in the manufacture of such items as refrigeration equipment and soda fountains. The work is done by a skilled craftsman, the sheet metal worker.

The CVS plan in sheet metal shop is designed to provide students with ample experience in the use of customary hard tools, and such machines as the brakes, bar folder, and rollers. The student is also taught the science, mathematics, and drafting involved in the layout of sheet metal parts.

Employment opportunities for CVS graduates are excellent. Craftsmen are in demand in the fields of heating and ventilating; gutter and cornice work; fabrication of metal doors and windows; air conditioning; and in the mass production of sheet metal articles.

Graphic Arts

Frank Costello isn't typing. He is setting type on the Linotype machine for running off our school newspaper, the Trademaster.

Dan La Rosa is opaquing a negative from which an offset plate will be made. He is very careful with his work.

Chicago Vocational High School print shops are divided into three main departments: hand composition, linotype, and pressroom. The fundamentals are taught in this shop so that the students will have a good background when they apply for jobs in the industry.

In hand composition students learn the basic printing method, setting type by hand. They also learn to lock up pages or forms into chases for printing.

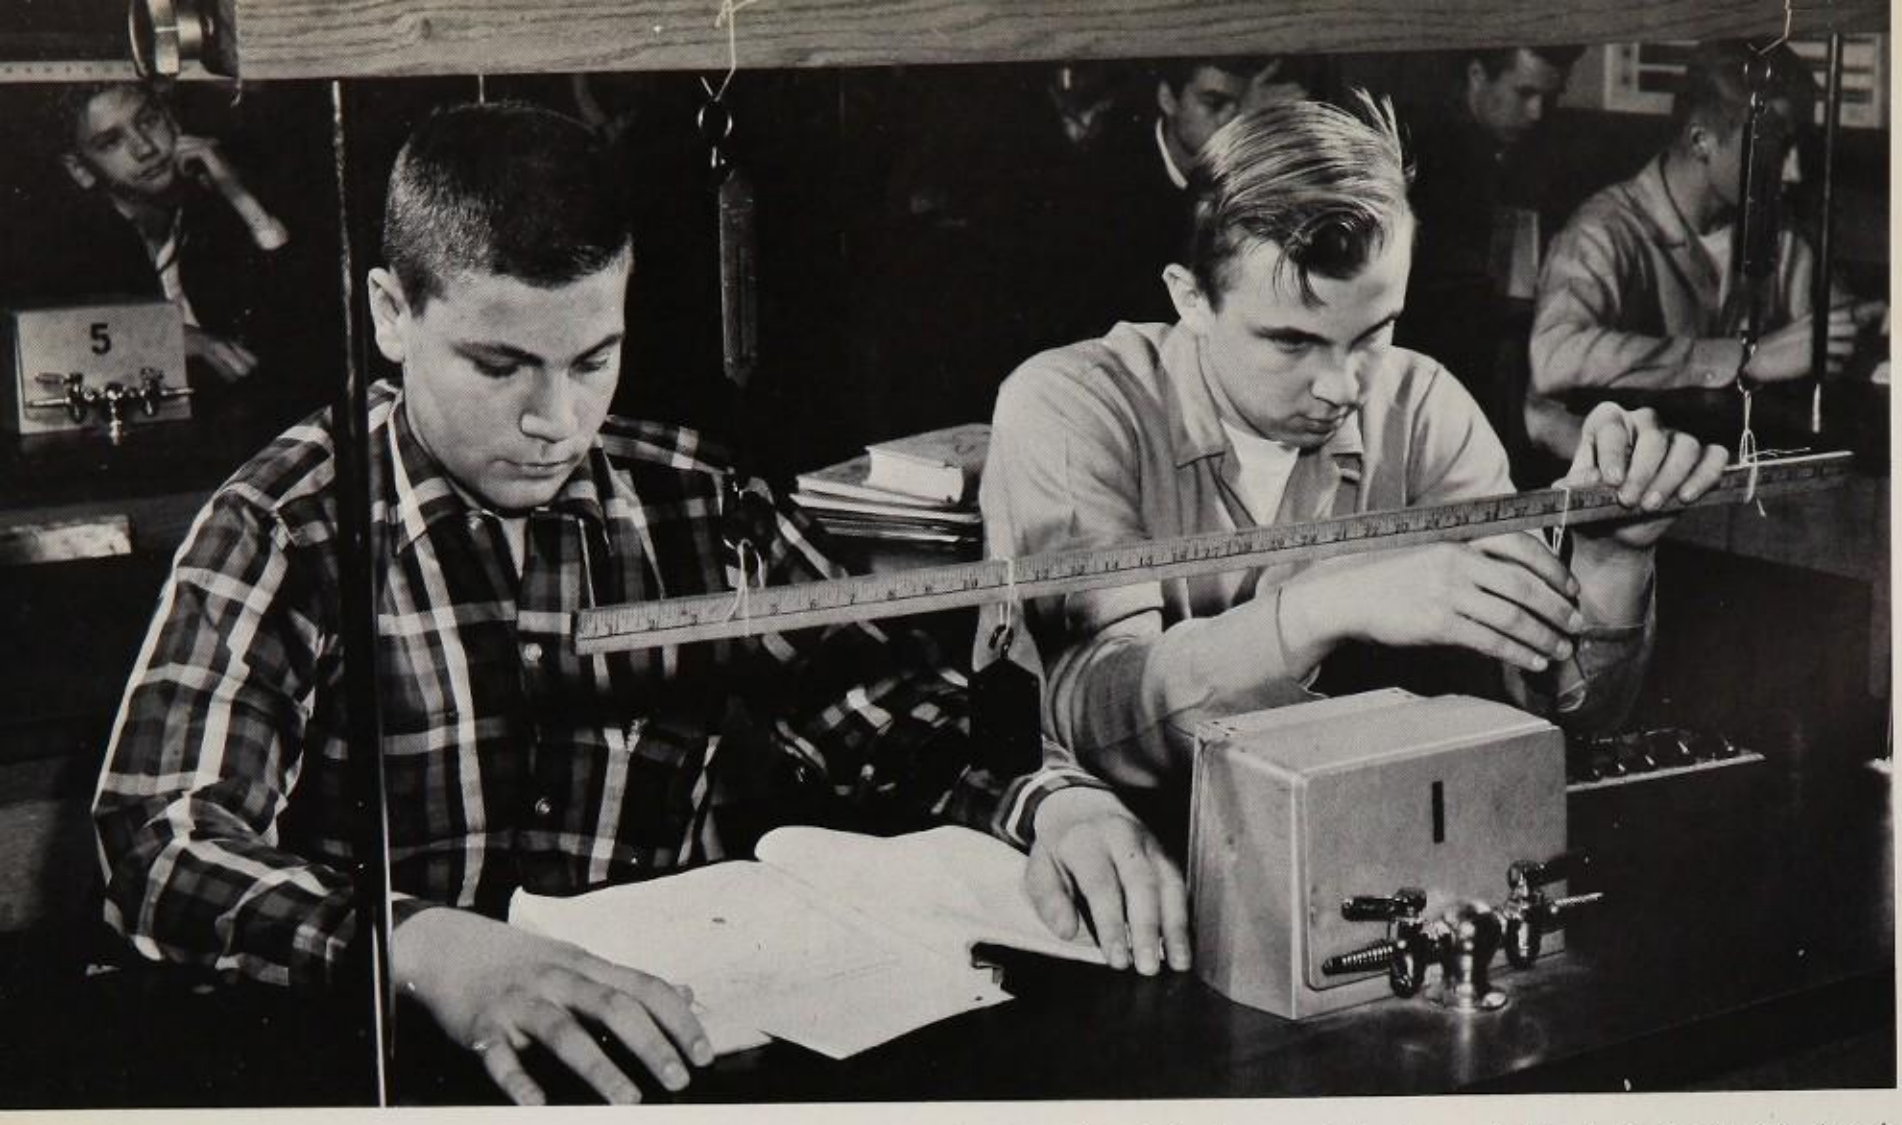
The linotype department is concerned with the running and repairing of the linotype machines. With a special keyboard, mats are set into lines which are then set into slugs. These slugs can be used thousands of times to print necessary material.

In the pressroom the boys learn how to run the various printing presses—platen press, Kluge, vertical, and offset.

The printing industry is ranked number 10 in the nation in the number of personnel employed. The ambitious boy graduating from CVS who has taken advantage of the fine teaching in the Graphic Arts Department will have no trouble finding a suitable position in the printing industry.

The offset press, under the capable direction of Stewart Wasserberg, will produce the material for Mr. Steinquist in no time.

Mr. Jones checks the type setting of Milton McElroy, Gregory Jankowski, Dennis Ziluis, and Robert Kosmola.



Arthur Frangella checks the expected outcome in his physics book while Joseph Karales completes the experiment with weights.

Physics

The physics program of CVS is available to students who have completed algebra and geometry. Through lectures and discussion groups they acquire a knowledge of fundamental physical principles such as Newton's laws, atomic molecular structure, and states of matter.

In the modern well-equipped laboratory students gain experience in the use of the scientific method and study such concepts as reflection of light, static electricity, and electronics. This course is of great benefit to those students who have electric shop or electronics. It is also of interest to those who are thinking of entering a field which is scientifically based.

Ralph Radley and Janice Gatewood are sure Mr. Coe can answer their questions on the slide rule.

Mathematics

The Mathematics Department provides in its curriculum for all levels of achievement in the subject. Those who are academically talented are placed in a more extensive curriculum with the use of special texts. The students with average ability will take Algebra I in first year and Geometry I in second year. Students needing special help will be placed in a remedial group.

Upon request a student with excellent grades may be placed in the advanced sequence in his Junior and Senior years. Books, pamphlets, mathematical models, and a self-teaching machine are available to students for individual projects and to increase their mathematical knowledge.

Math students also have the opportunity to participate in the Science-Math Fair and the Craftsmen's Fair held at our school.

The girls are hoping that the representative from People's Gas Company will let them sample her finished product.

Foods

Etiquette is part of the course for Janie Marin, Sharon Peterie, Debbie Schmitz, and Susan Franck.

Linda Robertson and Sheila Borroughs are busy creating a tangy dish for their foods class.

Certainly an art as old as cooking cannot be left out of a school's curriculum. Naturally CVS has a fine course to offer to those girls who are interested in learning to cook.

The beginners start by setting tables, preparing simple dishes, and of course, cleaning up after themselves. Those who choose may take additional courses in this field and learn the skills of commercial cooking or how to prepare meals in large quantities for parties and such.

With the equipment and teachers available at CVS, who could not be interested in a department as fine as this?

Clothing

What an accomplishment it is to wear something you've made yourself and at CVS there are many proud girls who, because of the wonderful opportunities the sewing department has to offer, are wearing new outfits.

In this department the girls are taught to mend, tailor, embroider, and sew and alter their very own clothes. Many girls choose this subject because of its challenging and interesting nature.

Although the simple skills learned can be used in emergencies almost every day, some girls continue to sew professionally.

Skill in cutting patterns is essential for a properly fitting garment. Francine Lowe and Carolyn Murray apply their knowledge to their new outfits.

While Mrs. Johnson explains the importance of following a pattern to Carolyn King and Roberta Kartelija, Maxine Clark makes adjustments on her sewing machine.

Architectural Drafting

Completing the coloring on this drawing of a modern home is Danner Bierhaus.

In the student's first year of architectural drafting, emphasis is placed on the uses, characteristics, and sizes of the basic building materials. Later, different types of heating systems, electrical installations, and plumbing units are studied.

The second year includes learning how to plan landscapes. This entails learning the different species of flowers, shrubbery, and trees. The student must have all parts of his design in harmony so that the building and its surroundings are beautiful to the eye.

Architectural drafting is the universal language of the architect, designer, and builder. To translate ideas so that they are clearly understood by the people involved, a system of symbols has been devised. This "language" is used by the entire building industry which is second only to the automobile industry.

Mr. Peterson points out an architectural design to Sam Campbell.

Machine Drafting

Nick Pawlenko, Paul Nowakowski, Frank Moskal, Gerald Wagner, Greg Biela and James Moss carefully sketch machine parts with the help of the overhead projector.

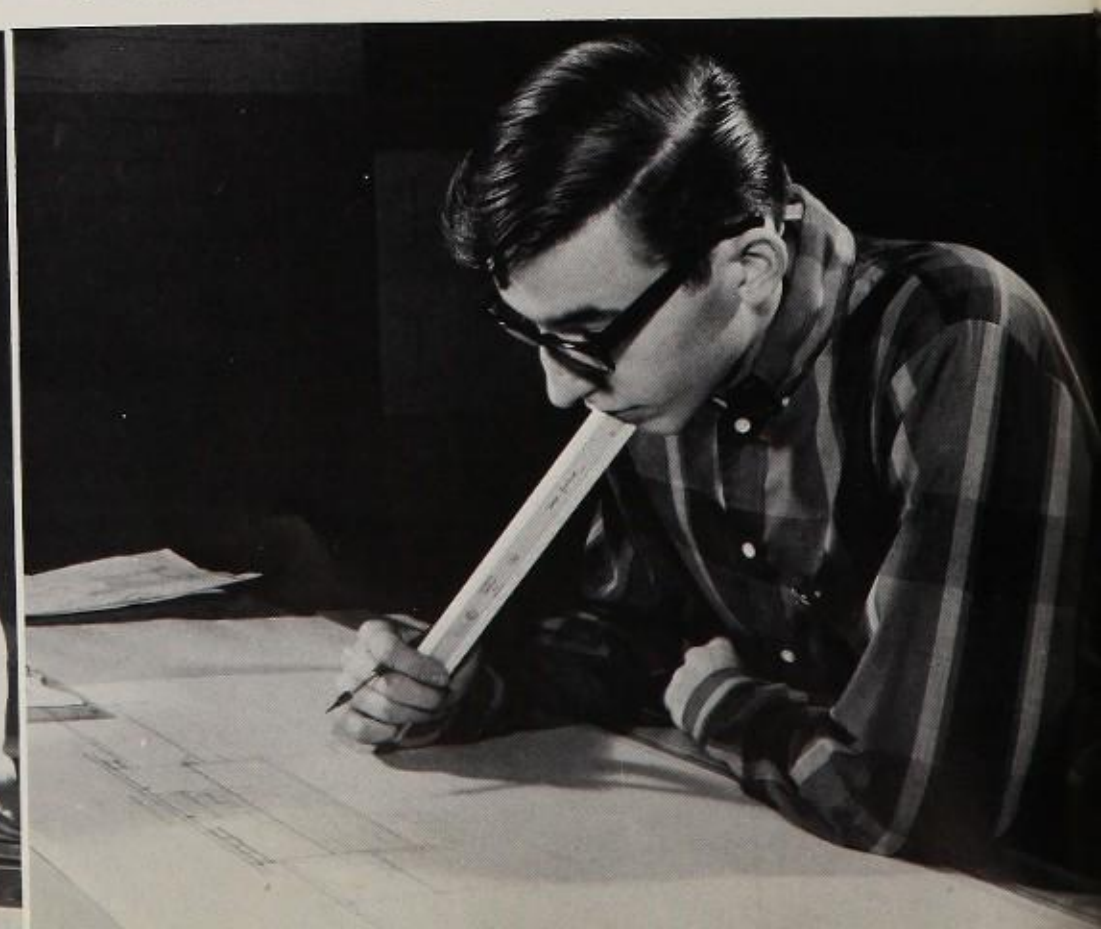
This program of study and technique development in the engineering graphics field is unique. While many engineering drafting courses are presented by many schools, none approach the degree of accomplishment in information acquired or skills developed by the young novice draftsman of CVS at a high school level.

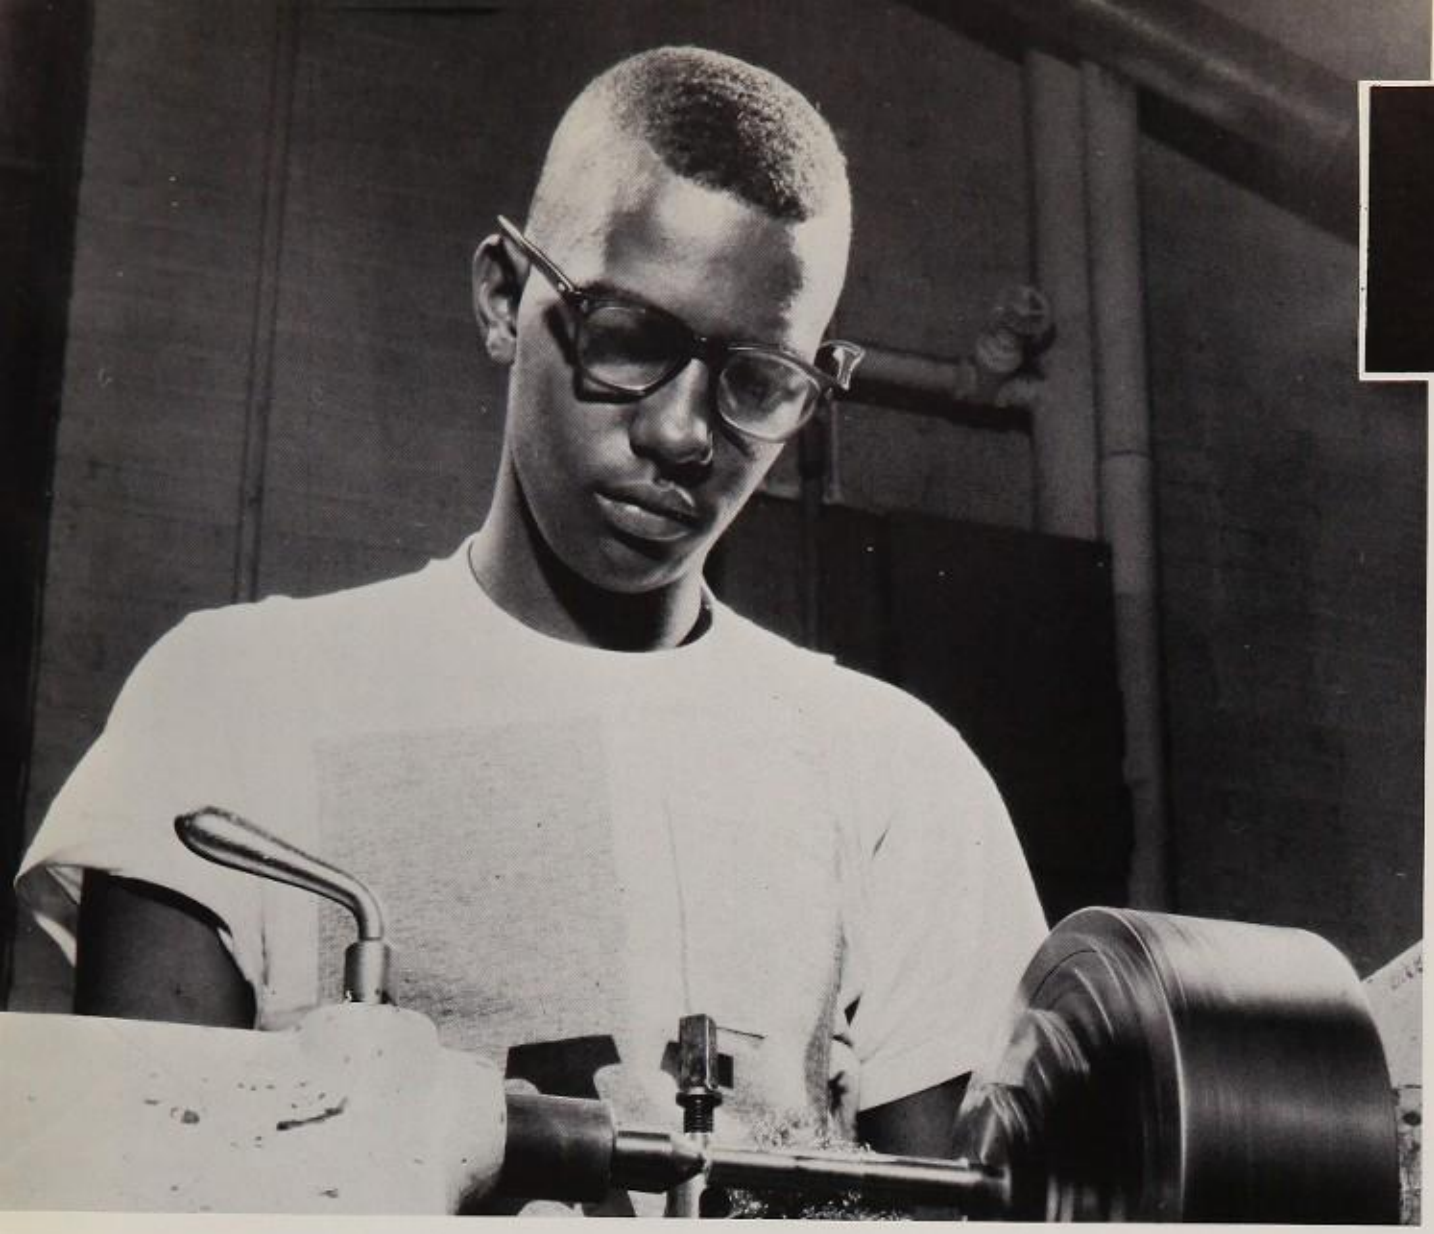
Mr. Young has carried on a continuous follow up study of the graduates from machine drafting for the past thirteen years. The results of this survey show that since June 1954, 263 students have graduated from this course of study. Of this number 50% went directly to college, 36% went directly to work as draftsmen, 5% went into the armed forces, and only 9% went into non-related work. All the students that went to college did not finish but they have stayed in the field of engineering graphics. A final count of 85% of our graduates are still actively engaged in engineering.

We are proud and gratified by these statistics. The success of our graduates is well-known and it has developed that once an engineering firm has employed a CVS graduate, he looks for more of the same. Our demand for draftsmen now outstrips our supply of graduates by 7 to 1 at the present time and it looks as though this condition will last for some time to come.

Mr. Young and Don Pryzbyla work together on a tough machine drafting problem.

Before continuing with his drawing for class, Dave Sinicih is giving thoughtful consideration to the next additional line. He wants no mistakes on his finished assignment.





Machine Shop

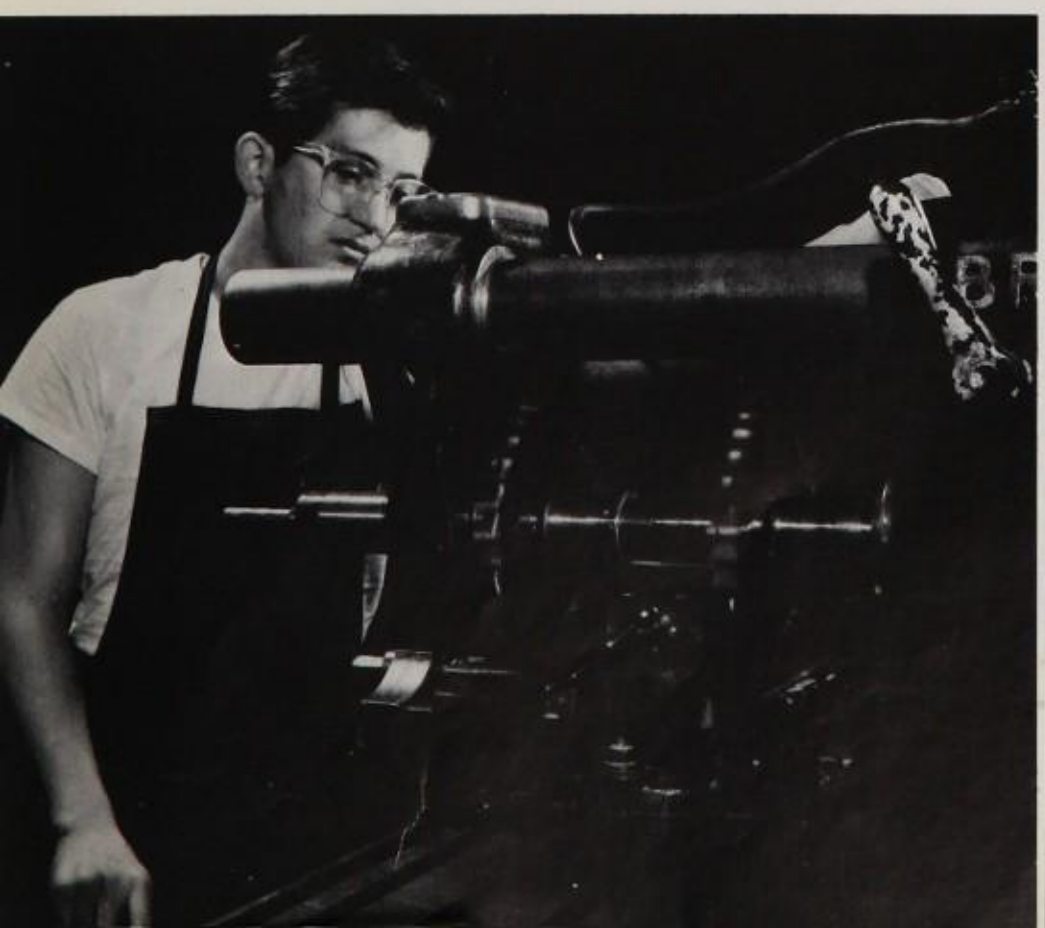
The lathe is the backbone of the machine shop. Here Thornton Lee makes good use of it on a project for class.

The machinist student learns how to turn metal into any desired shape or form. The student is first introduced to the lathe which is the backbone of all shop projects. He then learns the basic operations of the drill presses, milling machines, floor grinder, and surface grinder.

A student is taught the quickest way to set up a machine for the operation he is about to perform. To do this he must also be able to read the blueprints for the job correctly and have a working knowledge of mathematics so that he can cut a piece of metal to the correct size.

After two years of training, the ambitious student is able to apply for an apprenticeship with a firm of his choice and continue his machine education. When four years of apprenticeship training are completed, the trainee receives his machinist's card and is now well on his way in his chosen vocation.

Manuel Montoya carefully scrutinizes his machine before he begins working with the horizontal shattlemill.



Louis Colatriano carefully grinds parallel clamps so that they will have a smooth finish.

"One more makes four." This is the cheer that fired up our Cavaliers to win the Chicago Public High School League Football Championship Crown for the fourth time in a row.

Every member of the squad deserves praise for doing his part in making this team great. Coach O'Brian said this was one of the best teams that had come along in his coaching career at Chicago Vocational.

The individuals that stood out among the offensive team were quarterback, Greg Mroczkowski; halfback, Glen Baily; and fullback, Craig Mason.

The two crusading Cavaliers, Baily and Mason, with their lightning moves, had left their pursuers far behind. Both showed raw power when going through the middle, but going around the end they made everyone in the stadium stand up with stricken expressions.

If the opponents of CVS were stopping our ground attacks, Mroczkowski would open up our aerial attacks. He fooled many defenders by using his quick hands to fake a back into the line, then fade back and cut loose with a long ground gaining pass or a short down and out.

No one can forget the remaining members of the offensive team. Mike Osika rarely made a mistake at center. Charles Jenkins, Rich Urbano, and Larry Lewis, switching off in the guard positions, possessed the skill and experience needed. The tackles, Jerry Berna and Joe Garbarczyk had the know-how to open up holes. Ends, Danny Hendren and Jim Friffin were masters at being in the open ready to greet a Mroczkowski pass. Slot back Terry Watson, whose key blocks had sprung either Mason or Baily to the outside, completed the backfield.

Coach Nagel from the University of Iowa gives words of praise for our outstanding team at the annual football banquet.

Melvyn Skvarla, president of the CVS Alumni Association, presents Mr. O'Brien with tickets to the Rose Bowl game.

Dr. Sam Saletta receives a plaque from Mr. Beaver honoring him for his long time of service to the school team.

Mr. Crowe is happy to award his Most Valuable Player Trophy to Dennis Wells. Dennis seems rather pleased himself.

Because of muddy grounds, Baily couldn't quite turn the corner, and appears to be in a bit of trouble.

Coach O'Brien making it known to the team the strategy to be used in the second half.

Glen Baily is about ready to turn on the speed down the sideline to elude his Lane pursuers.

Again it's Baily breaking through the middle to gain much needed yardage against Lane Tech.

Here come the Cavaliers to stop a Taft advance.

Loyola Academy, one of the two teams to beat Vocational all year, comes out of the locker room, ready to go.

Coach O'Brian yells to his squad from the sidelines that they better tighten up if they expect to win. Coach Solty-zinski agrees with him.

This Taft player can find no place to turn to be safe from the Mighty Cavalier onslaught.

Varsity Wrestling 1967

This year's team as usual was a credit to CVS. In this, George Moran's fifth season as wrestling coach, the Palace grapplers were successful in reaching the semi-finals.

Wysingo Turner took first place in the city at 127 pounds; Errol Jackson was the team's most valuable wrestler; and James Pasevento recorded the most pins.

The team had Charles Gillette at 95 pounds; 103 and 112 pound spots were filled by Errol Pugh and Jim Pasevento respectively. Tommy Clinton held down the 120 pound slot; the positions of 127, 133, and 138 were filled by Wysingo Turner, Novik McFarland and Cliff Washington. Cedric Young wrestled at 145 followed by Frank Thomas at 154. The 165, 180, and heavyweight positions were held by Errol Jackson, Charles Jenkins, and Henry Sprvill respectively.

Coach Michna, through hard work and conditioning, produced another fine basketball team at the Palace. Although we didn't win the city championship we did advance into the Red Division as a result of our 1st place sectional finish.

Robert Lee earned positions on several all-city teams. Stant Clark and Leroy Hansborough also received mention on all-star teams.

Stant Clark, Robert Lee and Henry Merritt were this year's captains. Returning lettermen include Jerom Alexander, Billy Derrick, Wayne Ellis, William Farrell, Alex Hinton, Jerry Jenkins, Fred Roberts, Rich Wilson, Charles Bryant.

Baseball

Spring is green grass. Spring is flowers beginning to bloom. Spring is baseball. No spring would be complete without a baseball team practicing for future slugfests. Since the high school schedule extends only until June, our own team hindered by bad weather during late winter, must start their practice sessions in the gym. But as time goes by, our batmen work their way out into the fresh air and sunshine. When the games begin, fans by the scores turn out to encourage our Cavaliers onward to victory.

1967 Swimming Team

Our 1967 edition of the CVS Swim Team featured two top swimmers, Mark Matich and George Yaksic. Mark Matich the team captain won first place in the City Meet in the Individual Medley and 100 yard freestyle. George Yaksic was the second best breast-stroke swimmer in Chicago. Mr. Erickson has great hopes for the future based on the performance of his Frosh-Soph team. With work, determination, and a desire to win, we will have a winning swim team in the next season.

Cold weather or not, our track team starts its practice outside on the first day of April. There are twelve events in a meet, some of which are the dash, mile, high jump, and pole vault. CVS competes with teams in the South section, the South section relays, City meet, and in state qualifications.

The Cross-country is not an ordinary track team. There is only one event which is 1 9/10 miles long. The race is not run on a normal track, but, instead, on grassy paths through tree and bush-covered terrain. The season lasts only from September to October.

The understanding and appreciation of dramatic arts come quite hard to high school students. The Choral Groups Directing and assembling the Girls Chorus and the Mixed Chorus is done by Mr. George Rico; the direction of the Boys Chorus is entrusted to Mr. Walter Kowalski. These choral groups work especially hard to produce several hours of enjoyment for CVS students and parents during the school year.

These young "angels" clad in blue robes with gold collars provide gratifying music at such special occasions as the Spring Music Festival, Christmas programs, and at graduations.

There are some occasions when discontentment seems to arise because a particular song cannot be grasped easily, but their strong determination causes the accomplishment of that piece and many others that are similar in difficulty. All in all the end results more than satisfy the enraptured audiences for which they perform.

The ROTC has been a part of life at CVS since 1958. The members of this organization have always worked to make their unit an outstanding one. It is a familiar sight at CVS to see the ROTC drilling in the parking lot long before classes start for the day. Justifiable pride in their ability to perform spurs them on to these early morning practices.

Every ROTC cadet wishes to have a rank. During his four years he can be promoted to many different positions in the non-commissioned officers category. Through hard work he becomes qualified to be an able officer.

The training received by our ROTC cadets will be invaluable to them when they graduate. The self-discipline learned and the pride that comes with accomplishment are assets in any job situation.

Our Silver Jubilee

Dr. James Redmond and Mr. Eugene Beaver admire the portrait of our first director, Mr. Warren Hill.

Chicago Vocational High School celebrated its 25th anniversary with a luncheon and assembly. Among the honored guests attending our birthday were General Superintendent of Schools Dr. James Redmond and Assistant Superintendent of Vocational and Practical Arts Dr. Arthur Lehne.

The first director of our "Palace" was Mr. Warren Hill who was followed in 1947 by Charles Mitchell. Dr. Claude Ewing came in 1948 and James W. Crowe was principal from 1950-64. Presently Mr. Eugene Beaver is principal of CVS.

We are proud of our first 25 years and will be equally proud of our next 25.

The honored guests and administrators wait for the program to begin.

Cold weather never hampers the Cavalier spirit as is shown by Karen Paslowski.

The expressions on the faces of our cheerleaders indicate a point for the challenging team, but they know our Cavaliers will come through with another victory.

Cheerleaders

Who's faithful in coming to every game? Who holds up the team's moral? Who gives a lift to the audience when the score isn't just right? Why, it's the cheerleaders.

These girls work and train everyday after school, waiting for the big day when they will find out who made the varsity squad. This will probably be their most remembered day in all four years of high school.

With such enthusiastic support from Dave Pencala, Sue Ciferri, Barb Warnke, and Ronald Sargent our Cavaliers can never lose.

The night of the Sweetheart Dance was indeed a night to remember. Each has his own delightful memory to cherish always.

Kathy McGarvey enjoys pinning Thad Wisniowski's carnation on his lapel. He doesn't seem to mind the attention.

An Evening in Paradise

The Polynesian Islands set the atmosphere for the Junior Prom, Class of '67. Our gym was beautifully decorated fitting this romantic setting. We danced to the music played by the Bobby Sims' Quartet. The highlight of the evening was the coronation of the Junior Prom Princess, Nancy Kozlowski.

The sponsors and committees worked hard to make it such a successful "Evening in Paradise."

Resting between dances under the palm tree are Geraldine Zaremba and Terry Justice.

Our queen, Nancy Kozlowski, is surrounded by her court consisting of Dave Mickulski, Terry Piza and Thad Wisniowski.

Cupids Heartstrings

Do you need more tape, Wilfredo? Gloria Garza will be only too glad to accommodate you.

It was a romantic night, just grand for dancing. Couples strolled hand in hand with an aura of happiness about them. As they approached the gym, which was decorated to give the effect of a grand ballroom, smiles of delight shone on their faces.

Then came the moment everyone waited for, the coronation of Sweetheart Queen. Everything was still as the nine finalists walked across the floor through the "Golden Heart." The music grew louder as everyone waited. The envelope opened to proclaim Nancy Kozlowski Sweetheart Queen!

This dance will always be remembered. Long after graduation we shall think back and the Sweetheart Dance will appear as one of our fondest memories.

Naomi and Nancy Kozlowski were quite proud to be escorted to the dance by Jeff Johnson and Dave Mikulski.

The dance was a success and both chaperones and students enjoyed themselves to their utmost.

Senior Girls' Council

High grades, good conduct, dependability, and willingness to serve are only a few of the standards a CVS girl must attain to be considered for membership in the Senior Girls' Council. These high standards make its 24 members an elite group. Their job is to act as hostesses to guests, usher at important events and to always set an example for the younger students. They do their job well and are always in demand at special school functions.

Making the traditional uniform complete, Cheryl Lundgren places the red vest on the shoulders of Donna Busbee.

Mr. Beaver extends a hearty hand to former president of the council, Kathy Nakasuka, for a job well done.

After taking a solemn oath pledging to uphold the standards of the school, these girls don their red vests and become full-fledged members of the elite Senior Girls' Council at the Induction Tea.

Janice Locher attempts to answer pertinent questions about the school and its activities asked by these puzzled freshmen girls.

"Big Sister Day" is an important yearly event in which Senior Girls undertake the responsibility of informing all freshmen girls about activities, conduct, classes, and other items of interest, as Sue Pixler is doing here.

Everyone is helping but it looks as if the lot will never be clear.

The Big Snow

It kept us from work and school; it caused traffic snarls; it kept many of us in the house for four days. Yes, that was the "Big Snow" of January, 1967.

Our school day was shortened for two weeks as a result (this was a mixed blessing). It inconvenienced everybody, but now we can see it was an adventure, an adventure in learning about our own capabilities in time of stress. How did you fare in your adventure?

All work and no play doesn't make shoveling snow very much fun. It was inevitable that it would come to this.

Science Fair

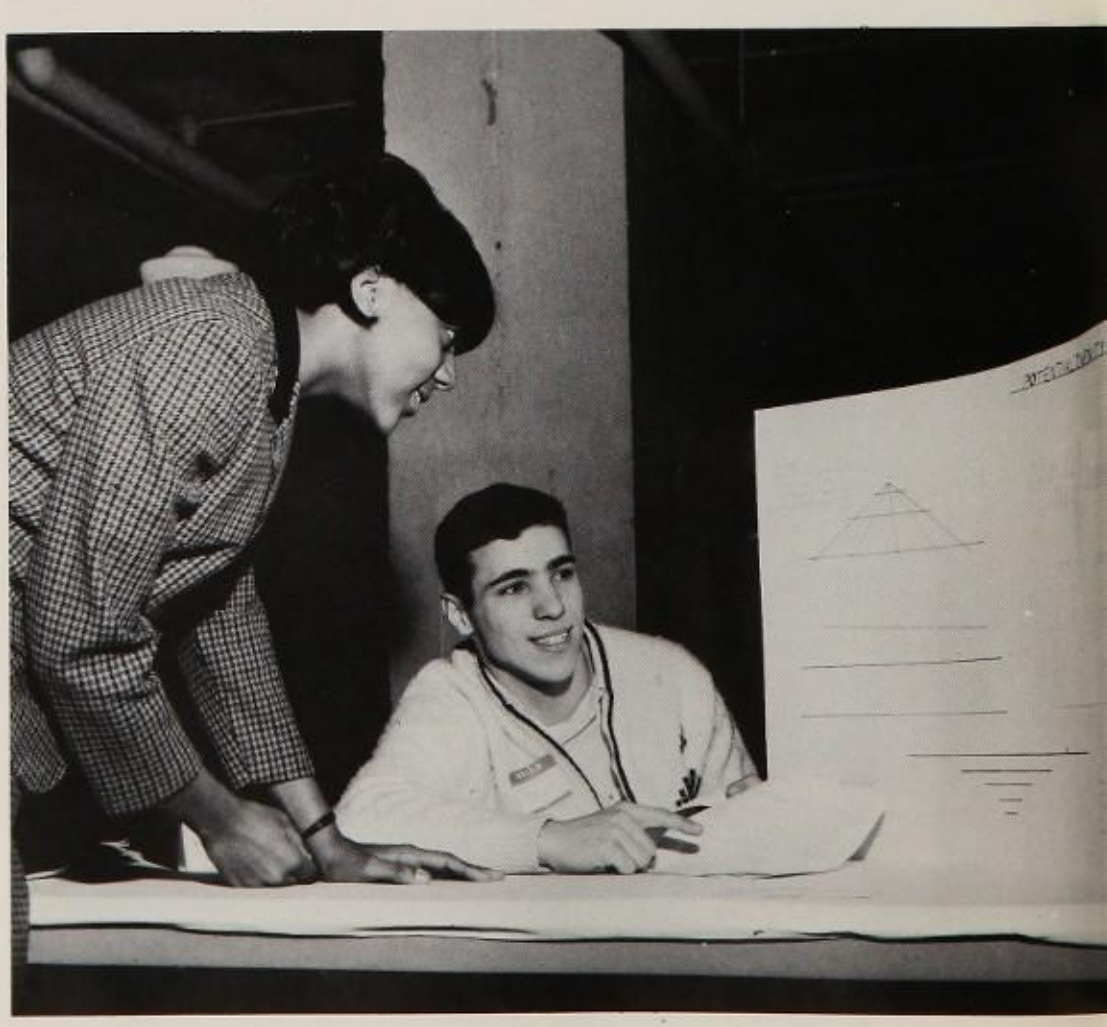
Looks interesting, doesn't it? Sue Cifferri observes Michael Cittadino's research on bacteria, which took first place at CVS.

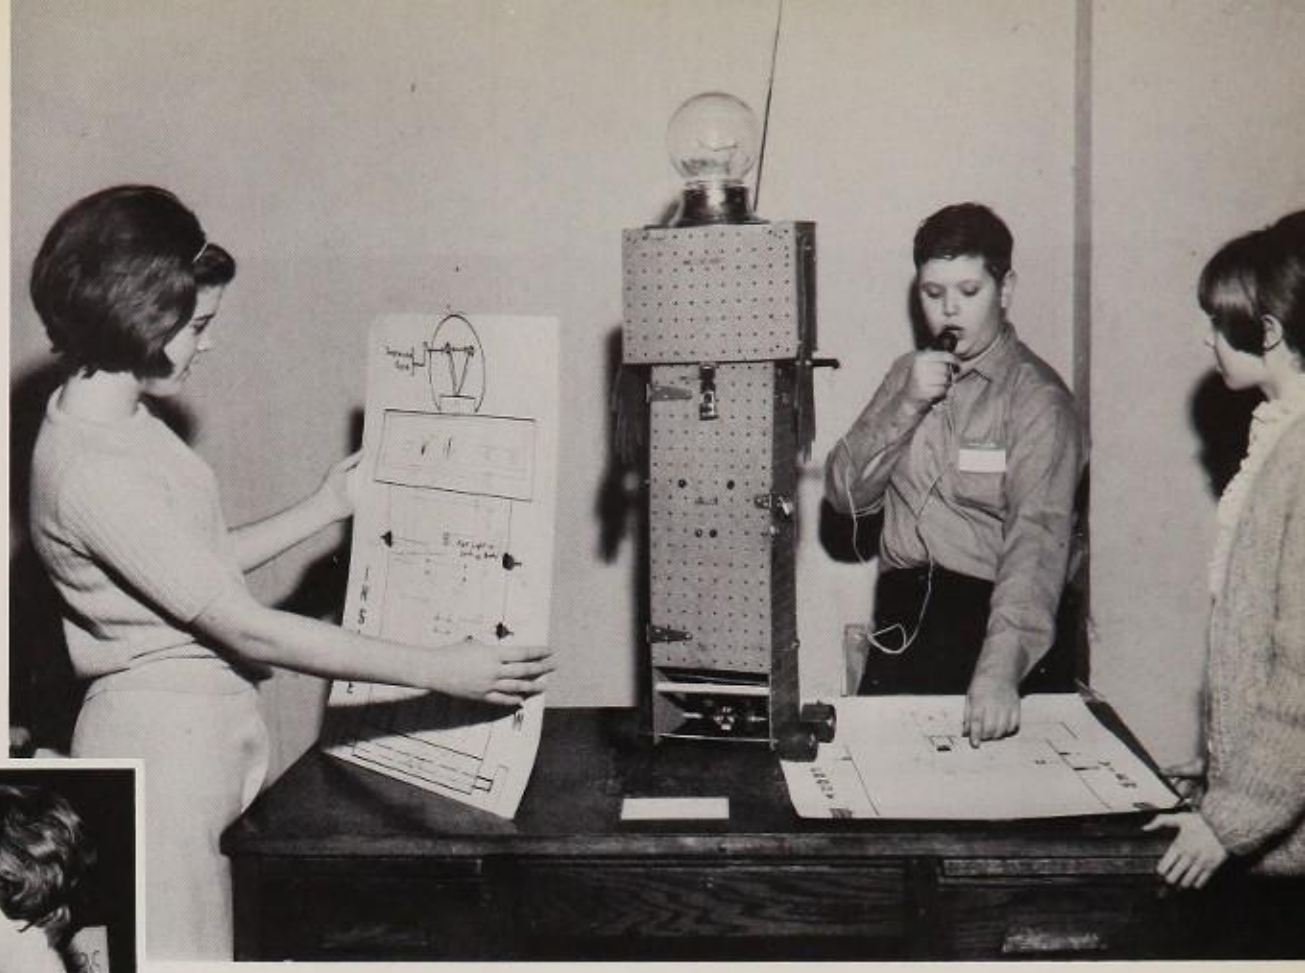
The seventeenth annual CVS Science, Mathematics, and Electronics Fair was held on January 10th and 11th, 1967, in the club room. Exhibits in general science, math, chemistry, biology, physics, and electronics were displayed. Of the 103 exhibits, eighteen won first, second, or third place awards given by a panel of 12 judges. These winners participated in the District 17 Science and Mathematics Fair held at Washington High School on March 2-3, 1967.

In the district fair, there were 13 winners who were to go on to the city fair. Five of these winners were from CVS. We also took 4 out of 10 "outstanding" awards and 4 out of 8 "excellent" awards in competition with the Bowen and Washington High Schools.

Thus far, CVS has been extremely proud of its reputation in the science department, and this year is no exception!

Julia Dyer listens to Ed Novak's explanation of Potential Infinity, after receiving an award for her project on tissue.





Totally confused, Tom Burton listens intently to Donna Busbee's explanation of a Hyperboloid of Revolution.

Steven Varaday proudly explains his project as Janet Courtney and Mary Cullen eagerly look on.

Walter Ponne completely flabbergasts Kathy McFarland and Fay Rouseff with his second place award in Electronics.

Competing for city is a great honor that Dave Olejmiczek and John Zmentek have won for their outstanding experiment on the guinea pig.

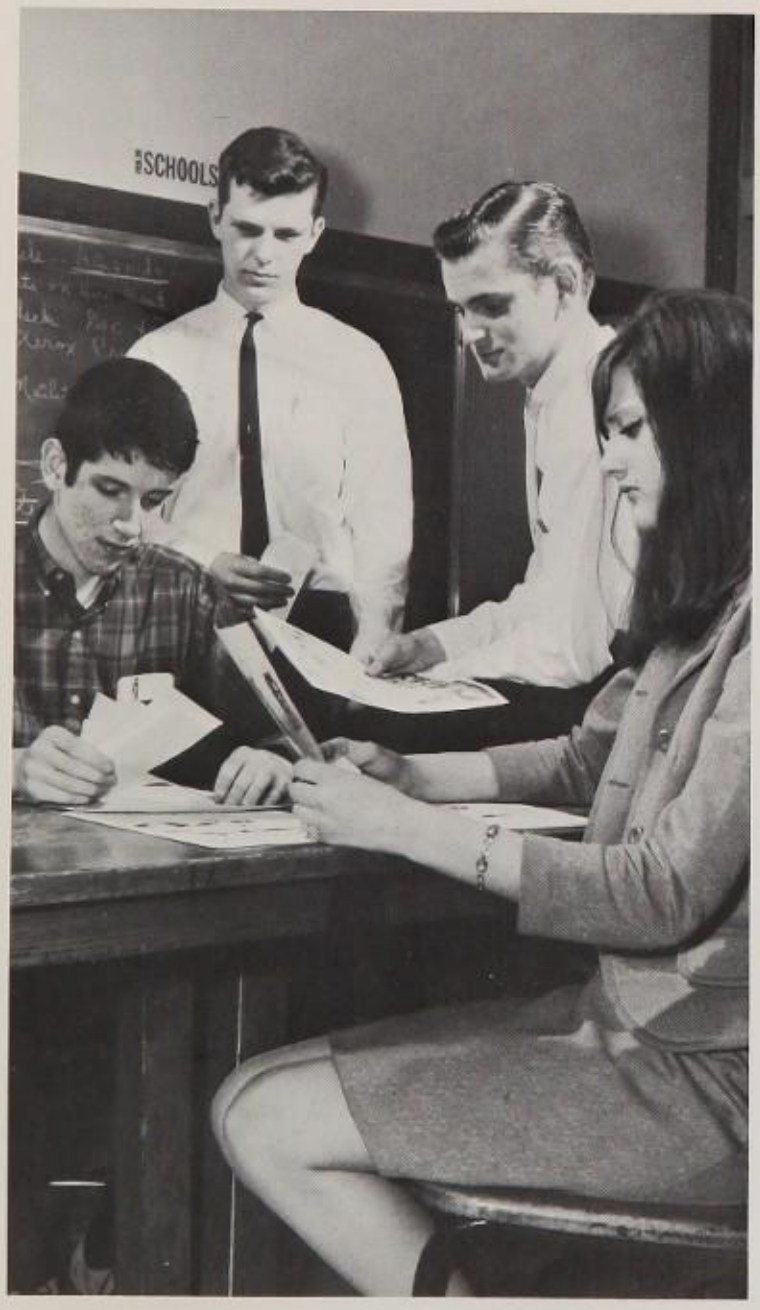
Trademaster

The student newspaper, the TRADEMASTER, aroused new attention with the appointment of Miss Dennis as moderator. The newspaper, run solely by the students, is published once a month. The TRADEMASTER informs the students of "what's happening" around the school.

The staff participates by writing, photographing, and printing the newspaper. The TRADEMASTER is printed in our own print shops under the direction of Mr. Bowles and Mr. Jones.



Karl Thor, Charlies Ziebarth, James Stalzer and Lee Akerman are busy at work preparing the next Trademaster.

The Trademaster will meet its deadline due to the dedication of people such as Marilyn Glinski and Noreen Griga.

Checking and re-checking may be boring but Rich Urbano and Sue Roberts realize its necessity.

Distinguished Achievement Award

Geraldine Crane, class of June, 1953, receives the Distinguished Achievement Award from Mr. Beaver and Mr. Daily.

Miss Geraldine Crane has been the only woman to receive the Distinguished Achievement Award of CVS given to an outstanding graduate. She graduated in June of 1953 and entered immediately into the service of the United States Government.

Miss Crane attained the extremely important position of Personnel Security Specialist GSE. Specifically, this means that Miss Crane and the thirty-nine people who work under her expert direction determine whether an individual's access to classified information is consistent with the best interests of national defense. So splendid has been her progress, that the government has entrusted to her the responsibility for training all personnel in the Investigation Review branch of government.

Her hard work and determination have brought her a success which is a benefit to all her countrymen.

Mr. Daily praises Miss Crane's work as he introduces her.

Everyone pauses long enough at the luncheon in Miss Geraldine Crane's honor to pose for the photographer.

Mr. Beaver informs the assembly of what is necessary to achieve the honor of the Scholastic Letter Award.

The Scholastic Award

The Scholastic Letter Award is the highest recognition CVS has for academic achievement. It is awarded only to those students who maintain A's and B's in all of their subjects for five consecutive semesters at CVS.

Very few students can attain this goal, but to the student who successfully meets these requirements, he not only performs a great service to himself but also to his school and country.

Mr. Beaver and Mr. Daily are presenting, with great pride, the Scholastic Letter Award to Kathy Selah, Jean Anderson, Gail Pfeiffer, Pam Gardner, and Pat Olszewski.

The administrative staff of Chicago Vocational High School is highly trained and has vast experience in teaching and administrating. These dedicated individuals have a great understanding of the students who come under their influence.

The administrators deal with such varied aspects of education as teacher and student programming; registration; discipline; keeping the necessary equipment in top condition; replacing needed textbooks; and maintaining classrooms, laboratories, and shops. Much time is spent in programming in order to meet the needs and abilities of the individual student and thus makes his program more interesting and challenging. Also, the modern classroom equipment and textbooks enable the student to get more from the courses and become better prepared for his future. The coordinating of such activities for a student body of more than 4,000 students and a faculty of more than 175 teachers is not an easy task for our administrators who devote much time, patience, and wisdom, for which we are all deeply indebted. They meet the challenge of present and future CVS students.

To Sil
The Best of luck
in the future.
You are a very sweet person. I will never forget all the fun we had although you are one of the biggest and
"nut" I know. I still think you are the most wonderful the best looking girl
in C.U.S. Stay sweet

Love
Shirley
(Michael)

Dear Sil,
It's been nice knowing you are sweet and kind and I'll never forget you. Don't forget me silly. Remember me as your friend always.

P.S. Good luck (and treed it)

Sil,
Best wishes and good luck to a sweet girl.
See you around.

Dear Silvia,
Best wishes to my cutest girl friend. It was really great being with you in High School and going to lunch with you, and partees + dances. Never forget Silvia you're a great girl friend
keep in touch
the summer

Silvia,
One of my good friends that I will always remember!
Stay sweet &
cute always. God Luck to you & always. Forever.
PS. I'll
miss you. Love Hope to see you.
Shela

Dear Silly

It's been nice knowing you for 3 yrs. Just think you only got 6 more days before you're really out. I just hope that in the future we will remain friends. your a real nice, sweet, cute and friendly person. Good Luck in the future with [redacted]. I hope everything comes out right for both of yours. Maybe when we graduate, in the summer we will go places. I doubt if I'll be with Felix.

Bye.
